Berlin Parley Is Reported Making Gains

But Firm Stand Of Russians Dims Hopes of West For Quick Accord

Berlin, Sept. 2 (NYHT).—The four military governors and their top advisers began to bargain in earnest today in the third consecutive talks seeking a technical formula for ending Berlin's blockade.

Although details of the talks focusing mainly on Berlin's currency, interzonal trade, and transportation remained a secret, it was generally reported that some progress had been made mainly at the level of the committee of experts.

After the one-hour-and-forty-minute meeting of the military governors, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American occupation chief, said there would be further meetings Friday.

The conferees are, beside General Clay, Gen. Sir Brian H. Robertson, British; Gen. Joseph-Pierre Koenig, French, and Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Russian.

The shortness of today's session as compared with previous meetings was held to be the result of a technical problem which had to be referred to the experts. The financial and trade committees of experts met both before and after the military governors' meeting.

It became known during the day that Western negotiators already have lost any hopes that present negotiations, in view of directives from Moscow to all four delegations, might find the Russians less difficult than usual.

British sources revealed that

Truman Optimism Stirs Speculation

A cryptic statement was made yesterday by President Truman and it led reporters to believe that important agreements in the interest of permanent peace may have been reached at the four-power conference in Moscow.

Mr. Truman said that in 1945 he had thought we would have a settled and permanent peace by this time. He said that we're still working on it and that he was sure we eventually would get it.

"Has anything developed in the four-power conference to provide a basis for your optimism?" a reporter asked.

President Truman said abruptly that he could ont comment on the four-power meeting. Then he volunteered that at a later date he thought the reporter would come to the conclusion that he knew what he was talking about.

Spy Hearing

Probe to Air Atom Leak To Russia

By the United Press

A group of American scientists suspected of passing atomic bomb secrets to Russia was reported yesterday to be the next major target of the House spy investigation.

An informed source said the story will be disclosed during round two of the House Committee on Un-American Activities' spy hearing, which is scheduled to begin next Tuesday.

It will involve at least two nuclear scientists who were said to have been kicked out of the Army's super-secret atom bomb project during the war for alleged security violations.

Thomas Won't Give Details

This source said the committee investigation still is in the preliminary stage, but that it is being followed up vigorously.

The committee already has heard witnesses tell of two alleged red spy networks operating inside the Federal Government before and during the war, and Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) said the next round of hearings will center on a third espionage ring.

He refused to give any details, but other informants said the third

Church Report Hits 2 Rival Ideologies

(Text on Page 19)

Compiled From Press Reports

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, Sept. 2.—The Assembly of the World Council of Churches today approved and passed along to the member churches an historic document condemning both communism and capitalism and calling for support of the United Nations.

The document rejected both ideologies on the grounds that they had failed to provide freedom and economic justice to a beleaguered world. It recommended no particular system but suggested a middle course between the two economic extremes.

An agreement passed during a five-hour floor debate approved church sponsorship of political parties "in some situations."

The document came to the Assembly this morning as a report on "The Church and Disorder in Society" drafted by an advisory section. The Assembly did not actually "adopt" the report. With only a few minor changes and two dissenting votes, it "received" the document and "commended" it to the member churches "for appropriate action."

Besides backing the U. N., the report on international disorder urged the preservation of freedom of press and religion. It sidestepped any definite attitude toward war.

The churchmen were told racial discrimination and economic in-

Talk of Reds Politics, Says UEW Chief

Fitzgerald Tells Congress He's Not Concerned About Infiltration Report

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Albert E. Fitzgerald told Congress yesterday he wasn't concerned about Communist infiltration into his United Electrical Workers Union and that charges of Red control were "just politics."

After persistent questioning by Chairman Kirsten (R., Wis.) of a House Labor Subcommittee, Fitzgerald said:

"I think it proper for anybody to hold office (in the union) if he is elected by the membership and is a law-abiding citizen."

In reply to another question he declared he had heard no reports or rumors of saboteurs and spies in the UEW. Pressed to take a stand on Soviet aggression in Europe, Fitzgerald said he didn't care "what is happening in other countries. Let's be concerned with our own country."

Sees Soviet Policy Promotion

Earlier, James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, whom Fitzgerald unseated as UEW president in 1941, testified that he believed Fitzgerald and other union officers "sacrificed the interests of the UE to promote the foreign policy of the Soviet Union." He said he "had no evidence" to show the officers were members of the Communist Party.

In addition to Fitzgerald, Carey named Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer, and James Matles, organizational director of the UEW. And with them he lumped the present union executive board, the staff of its newspaper "UE News," and the office and organizational staff.

First president of the 600,000-member union, Carey indentified himself with a movement within the organization, the "UE Members for Democratic Action" to combat Communist infiltration. Fitzgerald brushed the UEMDA off with the comment that "the same people in that organization want to be officers of the UE."

A possibility that the subcommittee later may question electrical manufacturers followed charges by Carey that management favored Communist labor leaders "because they're easier to get along with."

On the heels of that statement, Representative Kearns (R., Pa.) demanded that representatives of manufacturers be subpenaed. Kersten said he'd consider it.

Fitzgerald opened his testimony with a statement blasting the subcommittee on two counts: the right of the subcommittee to investigate the UEW and the impartiality of its members. He said:

"I want to question the right of this committee to proceed with this investigation.

"Second, I have serious doubts as to the ability of the two members present here as a subcommit-

Airliner Held Up By Passengers' Sitdown Strike

Shannon, Eire, Friday, Sept. 3 (AP).—A New York-bound Constellation was held up at Shannon airport early today by a sitdown strike inside the plane of 15 passengers whom the company wanted to unload.

When the plane with 34 passengers arrived last night from Prague, Frankfurt and Brussels, Pan American officials decided to cut down the number aboard because of strong Atlantic winds.

The 15 who were told their trip would be interrupted protested but eventually agreed to remove their luggage. Once back in the plane, however, they slammed the door and refused to leave.

Probe Still a 'Red Herring'

It's a 'Lie,' Says Truman To Charge He Protects Reds

President Truman said yesterday that any suggestion he is protecting Communists in Government is "a lie out of the whole cloth."

He told reporters they could quote him on that. He said he would authorize an adjective to go with the quote but if he did they wouldn't print it.

His "lie" to the charge he is protecting disloyal Federal workers came in answer to a news conference question. The reporter did not say who made the charge, but the House Committee on Un-American Activities has accused him of hampering its spy inquiry at every turn and protecting Communists on the Federal payroll.

Mr. Truman repeated that the protection charge was a plain lie. He again called the congressional inquiry a "red herring" designed to keep the public's mind off high prices, and said he wouldn't backtrack on the statement. He added he will prove it before the campaign is over.

The President said the spies we had to deal with during the war were German and Japanese and not Russian, that Russia was our ally in wartime. He has never heard anything about any great search for former German and Japanese spies, he went on to say.

As for protecting disloyal persons, he said he had never done that in his life. He said he is not protecting Communists or any other disloyal persons.

Asked about Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's statement that nothing much will be done about Communists in Government until the Republicans take over, he said the Republican presidential nominee

Truck Strike Spreading In New York

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—A truckers' walkout which threatens the city's economic machinery, spread to other drivers today and rises were predicted in already sky-high food prices.

Federal, State and city mediators talked with union and employer groups but no immediate prospect of a settlement was held out.

Mayor William O'Dwyer was not hopeful of a quick end of the tie-up. He set up special emergency procedures at police headquarters and alerted markets and hospitals to keep a close watch on food and other essential supplies.

The New York Retail Appetizers Association said "if the strike is not settled shortly, it may very well cause the inflationary spiral in food prices to skyrocket even further because of the law of supply and demand."

The association represents 250 retail food outlets.

The stoppage began yesterday when about 9500 members of Local 807 of the AFL International Brotherhood of Teamsters quit after rejecting a new contract negotiated by their officers.

Some members of the two other teamsters' locals in the city, 282 and 816, also were joining in the walkout although these units had approved new contracts.

O'Dwyer said police were check-

Yaden Elected AFGE Head; Urges Unity

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—James G. Yaden, a Civil Service Commission official, today was elected president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes for a two-year term. He immediately called for harmony and unity in the union, which had been split by the bitter fight for its leadership.

Yaden nosed out two other Washington contenders for the post, James B. Burns, who had been president until a few months ago, and Joseph Dunn, an employe of Treasury's War Bond division.

Burns had a lead of more than 2000 votes on the first two ballots. On the third and decisive ballot, however, Dunn threw his support to Yaden, who won by a 3000-vote margin.

Burns moved that the vote be made unanimous for Yaden, and his motion was carried. He pleaded for the entire membership to get behind Yaden in order to build the AFGE into an effective and powerful group of Federal workers whose voice would be heard and respected on Capitol Hill. He promised his wholehearted support to the Yaden administration.

All Took Place On Post

Three Fort Belvoir Soldiers Held in Nine Daring Robberies

Three Fort Belvoir soldiers were arrested yesterday in connection with nine daring robberies on the post over the past eight months.

The men, who are reported to have confessed to the post's provost Marshal Maj. Raymond R. Ramsey and Capt. W. J. Curley, of the Army Criminal Investigation Division, are:

Corpl. Donald R. Hanna, 21, of Providence, R. I.; Pvt. Harry L. Richter, 25, of Johnstown, Pa., and Pfc. Billie Bobo, 21, of Alabama.

Post officials named Richter as leader of the gang, which also included two other soldiers. One is now a civilian, the other is serving in Korea.

Of the nine post robberies, the suspects made off with $4460 in cash and $750 in merchandise. Their last foray was August 3, when they made off with two safes from the Belvoir prison. This haul netted them "exactly 17 cents," post officials said.

The robberies began last January 18, when the suspects failed in an attempt to crack a safe at the Fort Belvoir branch of the Citizens National Bank, located in the main Post Exchange building.

Since that time, they have used

Society Will Forego Its Right to Buy

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

An obstacle to converting Woodlawn, near Mount Vernon, into a public historic shrine was removed yesterday when a Catholic mission society said it would forego its right to buy if Woodlawn Public Foundation, Inc., could top its purchase offer of $165,000.

Later in the day, the foundation filed a formal petition with Fairfax County Circuit Court asking the effective date of a decree authorizing the estate's sale to the Immaculate Heart of Mary Mission Society, Inc., be postponed until December 31.

The foundation, made up of persons interested in preserving the former home of Nelly Custis, George Washington's adopted daughter, asked that it be granted a hearing before the December 31 date and that it be allowed to submit its own offer for the 126-acre estate. The decree selling the estate to the Catholic agency goes into effect today, unless the court acts on the new request.

Former Arlington Builder Top Bidder

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

President James Monroe's historic Oak Hill estate near Leesburg, Va., was sold at Court-ordered auction yesterday to Thomas N. DeLashmutt, former Arlington County builder and now a Virginia farmer.

DeLashmutt's bid of $220,000 took the 1725-acre property after an hour of strenuous auctioneering and dispirited bidding had run the price up from an opening bid of $200,000.

The sale still is not complete. Howard W. Smith, jr., of Alexandria, a trustee appointed by the Federal District Court for eastern Virginia to conduct the sale, said the price may have to be approved by the court. The uncertainty, he said, lies in a question about the total indebtedness of the present owner, Frank C. Littleton. Smith said he did not know how much the debts had been increased by interest on them, and that court approval would be required if the sales price is less than 75 per cent of the total obligations to be met.

Democrats Crack Down On Dixiecrats

Party Committee Assails Bolters, Offers Recognition To Loyal Group

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Democratic National Committee yesterday denounced leaders of the Dixiecrat revolt as "bolters" and in effect read them out of the Democratic Party.

It completed its break with the separate States rights movement in a telegram offering recognition to "loyal" South Carolina Democrats, who organize for support of the Truman-Barkley ticket.

The National Committee move, which one official said mean't "war to the finish" with Dixiecrat groups in all of the Southern States, followed designation of eight presidential electors, pledged to the States rights ticket of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, by the South Carolina State Democratic executive committee.

"Loyal" Group Boycotts Vote

A group of "loyal" South Carolina Democrats refused to participate in the vote, contending it deprived the people of the State of the right to vote for the candidate of their choice.

The "loyal" group asked the Democratic National Committee what its stand would be if they formed a "regular" Democratic organization in their State to replace the one backing the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

William J. Primm, jr., executive assistant to Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, in a statement cleared by the chairman, promptly promised such a movement official party recognition.

Primm's Telegram

Primm's telegram, in effect launching the long-awaited purge of party bolters, read:

"The Democratic National Committee appreciates the action of loyal Democrats of South Carolina in standing by the regular Democratic Party and its nominees headed by President Truman and Senator Barkley.

"The Democratic National Committee approves of the program you have started to assure the regular Democrats of South Carolina have an opportunity to vote for the regular party nominee.

"When you have officially organized the regular Democrats of South Carolina through proper proceedings there can be no course for the Democratic National Committee to take but to recognize the group as the official Democratic Party of South Carolina.

"The group now organized un-

Japs Get Back Oil Industry and Some Shipping

Tokyo, Sept. 2 (NYHT).—General MacArthur's headquarters celebrated the third anniversary of the Japanese surrender today by handing back the petroleum industry to private enterprise and permitting limited private operation of the nation's shipping for the first time since 1942.

At the same time it was made known that regulations are being prepared to facilitate foreign investment in this country by permitting foreign traders to acquire land, house, office space and other necessities on broader terms than heretofore authorized.

17-Word Agreement

Love Balm Suit for $150,000 Against Wiley Is Dismissed

A 17-word agreement to dismiss the $150,000 breach of promise suit brought by an auburn-haired former congressional secretary against Harvey W. Wiley, jr., was filed in District Court yesterday.

The action wrote the final chapter in a lusty case which resulted in a court-ordered mistrial last spring.

Neither the attorneys for the complainant, attractive Camille Nowicki, 34, of 1741 Lanier pl. nw., nor for Wiley, son of the late pure food champion, would divulge contents of the settlement.

Yesterday's petition, filed by Arthur J. Hilland for Wiley, and Joseph O. Janousek and Lester Wood for Miss Nowicki, in effect nullified a petition filed some months ago to reinstate the original verdict in the case.

Yesterday's agreement was entered "with prejudice," a technical action designed to prevent reopening of the case.

This petition was filed after Justice Jennings Bailey declared a mistrial May 5, accusing the jury of 10 men and two women of "going beyond my charge."

The jury, after listening to days of testimony about the boudoir-to-boudoir romance, decided to give Miss Nowicki an extra $2000 for "the aggravation . . ."

Judge Bailey had stipulated earlier that the jury's award should only cover breach of promise and punitive damage. The jury had awarded $10,000 on each of these counts.

Miss Nowicki, mother of a 2-year-old son named Timothy Wiley, said the 35-year-old scion of a prominent Washington family promised to marry her in August, 1945, but reneged because of his mother's objections.

Wiley's mother, socially prominent, testified for her son.

Truman Asks Compulsory Health Setup

The Truman Administration yesterday proposed that Federal, State and local governments undertake a public health program costing more than four billion dollars a year for ten years.

The program was outlined in a report by Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing after a seven-months study requested by President Truman last January.

Mr. Truman gave his blessing to the proposal at his weekly news conference. He read a statement pointing out that it corresponded with recommendations made by him to the last Congress. He added that the proposals were similar to those indorsed by "more than 800 professional and community leaders," except for public health insurance, at the National Health Assembly here last May.

Mr. Truman's action promises an interesting and bitter fight during the next two months. Medical organizations already have tabbed the compulsory health insurance proposal "socialized medicine."

The White House statement virtually threw down the gauntlet to some Republican leaders including Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio), who

Wallace Gets Dozen Eggs In Shreveport

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Shreveport, La., Sept. 2.—After a peaceful day of campaigning in Mississippi, Henry Wallace was the target for another barrage of eggs in this Louisiana city tonight.

Wallace had called off a schedule speech here on advice of police authorities, who said it would be dangerous for him to appear in public. Instead, Wallace made a radio address.

A crowd of 200 gathered outside of station KTBS as Wallace emerged, following his talk. A dozen or so eggs were hurled at him. Most of them hit onlookers, but the Iowan took one on the chest.

In his radio address tonight, Wallace said that through his program he seeks peace, an abundant life an "an extension of human freedom, not only in the South and in the Nation, but througout the world."

He said he is hated by some for his "idea of human freedom" because "it means equality for Negroes."

"Who gains from making race prejudice a flaming sword?" he asked.

On the way to Shreveport, during a stop in the town of Monroe, La., somebody fired an over-ripe tomato at Wallace but missed him.

Mississippi was courteous to Wallace despite the fact that he went on the air and accused the State's Governor, Fielding Wright,

Brannan Wants Food Prices High, He Charges After Talk With Dewey

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The fight over who is to blame for high prices, long promised as one of the chief issues in the fall political campaign, started off with a bang yesterday.

As it raged, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that wholesale prices showed a decline of 0.5 per cent in the week ended August 28.

"A general decline for most farm products and foods was mainly responsible," BLS stated. Farm products dropped 0.9 per cent.

The BLS Wholesale Price Index dropped to 168.4 per cent of the 1926, or normal, average, the lowest in three weeks. It still was one tenth of 1 per cent above four weeks ago, and 9.4 per cent above the same week last year. The previous week's index stood at 169.2.

The political battle began with a charge by Harold E. Stassen that Agriculture Secretary Brannan was trying to keep food prices high. Stassen made his statement after a long conference with Republican Nominee Gov. Thomas E. Dewey at Albany.

His charges were an echo of earlier accusations along the same line he had leveled at former Secretary Anderson last winter when Stassen was campaigning for the Republican nomination that went to Dewey.

Brannan Answers Quickly

He didn't have to wait long for a reply. Brannan came back with a blistering answer. President Truman referred to Brannan's answer at his press conference, and promised that more would be forthcoming at a press conference Brannan has called for 3 p. m. today.

When a reporter asked Mr. Truman if he was going to have campaign charges answered by experts, the President replied that it wasn't a campaign charge. He added it was only a misstatement of fact, and that he was having the facts put out. He further stated that the crop support program is not a big factor in high prices.

He corrected an impression he said had been conveyed in a recent local article on price supports. He said the news story indicated that price supports had cost the Government 300 million dollars this year, whereas they had cost

Custer Massacre Indians' Reunion Votes Approval

Rapid City, S. Dak., Sept. 2 (AP).—Six of the Indians who remember the Custer massacre held a reunion today. Opinions of the warriors who took part in the fight are unchanged. They'd do it again.

The Indians, whose ages range from 78 to 98, still are proud of their people's triumph over General Custer at the Little Big Horn on June 25, 1876. They are only sorry the Sioux are not strong enough to chase the white man out of their hunting grounds and their Black Hills, which they believe to be inhabited by the Great Spirit.

The six are Iron Hawk, 98; Dewey Beard, 88; High Eagle, 87; Comes Again, 84; John Sitting Bull (son of the famous chief), 80, and Little Warrior, 78.

"I am old and tired," said Iron Hawk. "We owned the Black Hills. We still do. I wish we had the power to get them back."

Little Warrior was 6 at the time the Sioux triumphed over Custer.

Well known as a medicine man to Indians, Little Warrior presided at a solemn Yupipi meeting at midnight, an event that officially commenced the first reunion of the Custer battle survivors in 38 years.

Little Warrior disrobed as he started the Yupipi, which a white man might compare to a seance, explaining:

"I undress because when I came into this world I had no clothes."

Socialists Boycott Cabinet

Schuman Rejects Wage Pleas As Price Protests Mount

Paris, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Deserted by the Socialists and plagued by snowballing protest strikes, Premier-Designate Robert Schuman doggedly worked toward formation of a right-of-center government tonight.

The Socialists said they would not take part in any government that did not promise immediate relief from the rising cost of living. Nearly 200,000 workers throughout France were on strike, protesting high prices and demanding 33 per cent wage increases.

But Schuman said he would not agree to any wage increases and that he would form a cabinet without the Socialists. Such a government would be in the minority in the National Assembly, however.

The Premier indicated that the new cabinet would have a maximum of 12 ministers and several undersecretaries of state.

Labor unrest took a more serious turn when strikers at Dijon, a major railroad center in eastern France, seized the station and freight yards, forcing main line trains to make a 2-hour detour.

In Roubaix, a big textile center near the Belgian border, 40,000 workers were idle for 24 hours. Several thousand coal miners went out in the northern fields near Lille. Strikes continued at the Sochaux auto plant and Creusot Munitions Works. But a general strike in Marseille was ineffective.

The Socialists bolted the middle-road coalition because they do not want to share the blame for government refusal to authorize wage increases. Schuman hopes to curb inflation with a stern new economic program, one similar to that which caused the Socialists to throw him from power in July and oust his successor Andre Marie last week.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Oak Hill Buyer, Arlington Native, Began Successful Career in 1929

Starting in 1929 of all years, Thomas N. DeLashmutt with his brothers wrote a success story for themselves that has few parallels in Arlington County.

He picked that year to go into the construction business, under the firm name of DeLashmutt Brothers. Things worked out well enough so that yesterday he had $22,000 to put on the line for the purchase of Oak Hill, historic Loudoun County estate once owned by President James Monroe. Completion of the sale means putting another $198,000 on the same line in 100 days, and friends say he will have no trouble doing it.

Thomas N. DeLashmutt came to Oak Hill for the court-ordered auction sale yesterday with a younger brother, Basil M. DeLashmutt, an engineer in Arlington and member of the county board.

Unflustered by Bidding

Thomas, 48, hatless, with iron gray hair, deep tan, and the build of a football player, attracted no special attention in the crowd of 300 persons, until he put in the second bid for the classic, pillared manson, and the 1725 acres of rolling Loudoun County farmland that go with the house.

Then he stood quietly, unflustered, sometimes talking with his brother, during the hour that the bidding went on. He offered the top price, $220,000, over competition of but two other bidders.

He said simply that he wants it for a home for himself, his wife, the former Miss Eugene Reed of Richmond, Va., and their three children, Janice, 12; Thomas, 7, and Melinda, 4.

He explained his wife likes old houses, and he likes farming. Moving to Oak Hill would mean that they would have a house about the same age and same size as the one they have now, and a farm three times the size. Their present home and farm are near Haymarket, Va. He has operated the place for 10 years successfully as a stock farm, and his intention is to devote Oak Hill to the same purpose. He also wants to make the place livable, without major alterations in the historic mansions.

Native of Arlington

DeLashmutt is a native of Arlington, son of T. J. DeLashmutt, now retired after a long career in the insurance business in Arlington.

Thomas worked his way through three years of a civil engineering course at the University of Virginia. Fellow students recall him as being rather uncommunicative, a hard worker. After leaving hte University of Virginia, he atended George Washington University for a time, and played some football there.

He started his Arlington career as the county engineer, serving in that job for about five years.

He left it in 1929 to form his own contracting firm with his brothers. They did a lot of pipe laying work, gas mains, sewer lines in Arlington, and elsewhere in the Washington area.

Entered Housing Field

By 1938, a $290,000 contract to add a new span at the Virginia end of Key Bridge was something that now is recalled as an ordinary sized job for the firm. The firm did much of the grading of the Washington National Airport, the same for the sweeping network of roads around the mammoth Pentagon Building.

The firm entered the housing field with the development of Barcroft, the big apartments on Columbia Pike near Glebe rd.

Thomas retired from his position as president of the contracting firm about three years ago, leaving it in the hands of brothers, John, now president, and Charles, secretary-treasurer. He still visits the office regularly and keeps a hand on policy, but he considers his major interest now to be farming. Fishing comes in, too—he usually spends a part of the winter at Vero Beach, Fla., where he has a cruiser and does a lot of deep-sea fishing.

When he heard talk yesterday, after the sale, of President Monroe having been a plain man, plainest of the plain, Thomas DeLashmutt said under his breath, "That's all I am."

Meat Prices Tumble As Much as 24 Cts.

Meat prices tumbled here yesterday as much as 24 cents a pound with the downturn credited to consumer resistance, hot weather and vacations.

Specialists were at odds, however, as to the possibility of further reductions next week with a spokesman for a chain store declaring that additional cuts are in the offing while a local packer said a rise is expected due to the Labor Day holiday in slaughter houses reducing the amount of meat dressed.

Leading the decline was leg of lamb cut from 79 to 55 cents in at least one large market.

Grade A chuck roast went from 79 to 59 cents; round steak from $1.10 to 89 cents; loin lamb chops, $1.10 to 69 cents and choice steaks from $1.10 to 89 cents.

The chain announced pork loin slashed from 69 to 63 cents; chuck roast from 73 to 69 cents; grade A boneless rib roast, 98 to 93 cents, and legs of lamb, 75 to 65 cents.

A spokesman for the chain declared further reductions were slated for next week.

An opposite prediction came from local meat packers who pointed out that slaughter houses would be operating only four days next week because of the Labor Day holiday. He saw this as meaning less meat for the market with consequently higher prices.

He admitted movements of meat from the packing house to retailers had slowed. "I don't think folks have the money in their pockets buy at current prices," he said.

"Besides," he said, "people ate less meat during the hot spell and there is always a decline before a holiday."

with the sale. If Littleton can raise the money to redeem the property, he has the right to do so within 90 days. His attorney, Robert H. McNeill of Washington, said there is now new reason for confidence that Littleton will redeem the property. Littleton was reported to be in Washington at the time of the sale. Littleton has hoped to make the property a historic shrine to the memory of its first owner, President Monroe.

DeLashmutt said he wanted the place for a home for his wife and their three children, Janice, 12, Thomas 7, and Melinda, 4. He said his wife always has been interested in old houses, and her interest is centered on the old Monroe mansion. His interest for the past few years has been stock farming, and he wants to use the 1725-acre property for that purpose. They live now on a 600-acre farm near Haymarket, Va., in a house built about the same time as the Monroe mansion. He said in the Oak Hill estate they would be getting a better home and better farm.

Plans No Alterations

DeLashmutt said he had no intention of making major alterations in the house, beyond making it libable.

The auction started at 12:35 p. m. when Auctioneer Robert L. Wright, who regularly handles farm auctions for the Loudoun County Court in Leesburg, moved to the front of the north porch of the mansion, and told some 300 persons gathered around the tree-lined north yard:

"All right, ladies and gentlemen, gather right up close, please, and give me your attention."

Wright read the formal advertisement of the court-ordered sale. He announced that 12 persons deposited $500—most of them were checks but at least one deposit was in cash—with the sale trustees, Smith and Edwin E. Garrett of Leesburg. Of the 12 only three persons entered the bidding.

Wright called for a bid of one million dollars for a starter. He dropped quickly to $750,000, then $500,000, then $250,000. David Rust, jr., of Leesburg, holder of a first trust on the estate of $166,000, opened the bidding at $200,000. It was his only bid.

De Lashmutt offered $205,000. "I'm going to sell this place if it takes all day," said Wright. "I have two hundred and five, two hundred and five thousand dollars bid for it, two hundred and five," he droned.

That price stuck for some 15 minutes. Wright took a break "to give you a little time to think," and to catch his breath and get a glass of water. After a 10-minute break, Wright called the price for five more minutes, then got his rise—$206,000 from Richard H. Hutchison, jr., of Laurel, Md., president of the Laurel Raceway, which sponsored harness racing there this year. With him was his father, also of Laurel. They said their plans were to use the Oak Hill estate as a stock farm.

DeLashmutt went to $208,000, Hutchinson to $210,000, DeLashmutt to $215,000. A few minutes later Hutchinson offered $217,000 then after hearing DeLushmutt go to $220,000, started to walk away. Wright walked out to the lawn to talk with Hutchinson. He returned to the porch, and at 1:33 p. m. declared the place sold to DeLashmutt.

A moment later, Laurence Hoes, RFC official who lives at 6115 Western ave. nw., and is a descendant of President Monroe, spoke from the porch to recall Oak Hill's historic associations, and remarked he hoped the new owner would not divide the place up into 10-acre chicken farms.

DeLashmutt grinned at that, and told a reporter he had absolutely no intention of dividing the property.

Hoes invited correspondence with the James Monroe Memorial Foundation in Fredericksburg, Va., of which he is an official, and voiced hope that contributions could be raised to redeem the home so it could be made into a historic shrine. The foundation is an outgrowth of Littleton's idea of making the place a historic shrine like Mount Vernon, and of using its income to set up scholarships for young Americans to prepare for the foreign service.

Church Group Offers to Yield Woodlawn for Shrine Creation

fax County Circuit Court took no action on the petition yesterday but said that he probably would hold a hearing on it today.

John A. K. Donovan, attorney for the Catholic agency, told reporters his clients would be "very pleased to have the estate converted to a public shrine if someone submits a higher bid," adding that the mission would be willing to wait a "reasonable time" before consummating the purchase to give the foundation time to raise the necessary money.

He said the mission had intended to use the historic house as a "house of study" for missionaries coming here from foreign countries and to build another building on the grounds for use as a boys preparatory school.

"The mission felt it could better preserve the antiquity and historic value of Woodlawn than could most other buyers," he said, but it still would be "very pleased" to have it converted into a public shrine such as Mount Vernon nearby or Arlington House.

The petition filed by the foundation pointed out that the estate, once a part of Mount Vernon, "has an interest, actual and potential, for millions of Americans."

It said the foundation was established "for the express purpose of purchasing Woodlawn and devoting it to the interest of the American Nation."

Assurance of "substantial contributions" have already been made, it said, and went on to state the belief that "a general campaign for funds will produce the additional amounts necessary to buy and prepare it for exhibition."

Woodlawn is now owned by Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood, widow of the Alabama Senator. She has been ill in Philadelphia since 1945. Negotiations for the sale are being made by trustees, Gardner L. Boothe of Alexandria, and H. C. Kilpatrick of Washington.

Weatherman Gets Down To Mere 51

The weatherman yesterday turned in another one for the record book.

After Washingtonians hadbroiled in a near-100-degree heat wave for almost a week, the temperature yesterday at 6:20 a. m. tumbled to 51, the lowest for the date since 1895 and the lowest this year since May 23.

But the weatherman warned it is not yet time to dust off the old bed-warmer. Today a high of 84 is expected with some cloudiness. Temperatures are slated to rise somewhat the next few days but no more torrid weather is in the offing.

The current pleasant spell was caused by a movement of cool air from the Hudson Bay region of Canada, the weatherman said.

Yesterday's high was 79 at 3:42 p. m., 3 degrees below normal for the date but almost 4 degrees above the August normal of 75.2.

Flood in Manila Recedes; Food Supply Threatened

Manila, Sept. 2 (AP).—Flood waters receded in Manila today but left more than 1,500,000 persons anxious about their food supply. Heavy rains in the wake of a typhoon deluged the city for 48 hours.

Mayor Manuel de la Fuente informed President Elipidio Quirino that hoarding of food had started in the city as the normal flow of fresh supplies from the country was cut off by flooded roads. There was heavy damage to Manila shops by the hip-deep water that destroyed roads and streets.

Shops, schools and government offices were closed and business disrupted by what oldtimers called Manila's worst flood in years. Waterfront activity was resumed as the typhoon swept 160 miles out into the China Sea after missing Manila and most of Luzon.

Democrats Back High Prices, Says Stassen

only that amount over seven or eight years.

Brannan, in a brief typed statement, called Stassen's remarks "a typically deceptive, inaccurate political statement."

It was "well timed," he said, "to coincide with action by the State of New York, under the direction of Governor Dewey, raising the price of milk to consumers in Rochester and Buffalo."

Stassen's charge, Brannan said, "is in essence an attack" on the farmer's price support system.

"I demand that Mr. Stassen or Mr. Dewey name the specified commodities which they had in mind.

"I wonder if they were thinking of milk.

New York Price Discussed

"If so, I should like to know whether Mr. Dewey advised Mr. Stassen that he had just caused an order to be issued by the State of New York increasing the price of milk to consumers in the cities of Rochester and Buffalo by approximately one cent a quart, effective September 1.

"I believe we should also like to know whether Mr. Dewey advised Mr. Stassen that he now sells milk produced on his country estate in New York at a substantial premium price above the price established under the milk marketing agreements administered jointly by the State of New York and the Department of Agriculture."

Brannan said both Dewey and Stassen "forget that I testified during the recent sessions of Congress in support of President Truman's request for adequate authority to stop the increasing spiral of food prices while they remained conspicuously silent."

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath got into the fight with a statement saying that Stassen was offering a Republican farm program that "will be popular with the rich Republican campaign contributors, since it is designed to hit only at the farmer and will do little to stop increasingly exorbitant prices and even higher profits piled on top of the present record profit yield."

Pauley Charge Recalled

Stassen said that food prices would drop in two or three months if the Government did not abuse its food purchasing power—or, "in other words does not pull another Pauley."

(Stassen apparently was referring to charges he made before a congressional committee last January that Edwin W. Pauley, then special assistant to Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall, had made a million dollars in commodity speculation with the aid of "inside information."

He added two other policies that would bring lower prices. They were (1) more careful buying by consumers, with emphasis on commodities in ample supply, and (2) constant vigilance against food profiteering.

"If these three things are given attention," he said, "it is my judgment that we will see lower food prices in the next two or three months, and that should include meat."

To Watch Purchasing

He added that he intended to "follow through with Governor Dewey in watching Government food purchasing."

Stassen said the Agriculture Department, with Brannan's approval, had issued a statement "for the purpose of raising food prices when they should have been shaking down."

He didn't identify the statement, but declared that "I believe it was a deliberate attempt to stop the downward trend of food prices that followed the Department's report of large crops."

When reporters asked what, precisely, the Department had said Stassen replied only that it was a "very nebulous statement."

The BLS report on wholesale prices showed that the total decline for the week was virtually all due to the drop in food prices and textiles. Many other groups went up, partly overcoming the drop in food prices. Farm products dropped from 191 per cent of 1926 to 189.3; foods from 189.5 to 187.8; textiles from 148 to 147.7.

All commodities except farm prices and food went up from 153.1 to 153.2.

The Associated Press reported that in New York retailers have announced price cuts as high as 20 cents a pound on some types of meats. This was largely due to the decline in meat-eating during the extreme hot weather last week.

Choice Steers Up

At the same time choice to prime steers set a new high record of $41.40 a hundred pounds in Chicago.

Henry Bobbin, a farmer in Nanticoke, Pa., advertised he would give cabbage free to anyone who wanted to pick it. Only 500 heads were taken.

A national survey of chain stores by the Chain Store Age revealed that sales volume showed an average gain of 12.2 per cent over a year ago.

Meantime two farm organizations jumped into the battle over farm price supports.

House Committee Blamed

The American Farm Bureau laid the blame for the inflexible price support law fixing supports at 90 per cent of parity all next year on the Republican-controlled House Agriculture Committee.

"From start to finish this organization fought to place the flexible provisions of the permanent price law in effect next January instead of deferring them until January, 1950, as does the new law," the bureau stated.

"Retail food prices are now at a record level," the bureau added. "However, the farmer's share of each consumer food dollar is still near the lowest point in five years."

It charged that "today's inflated food prices include record profits for middlemen."

Farmers Union Views

The National Farmers Union, on the other hand, supported the present price support law.

"The union maintains that it would be unfair to agriculture to lower its support prices and to leave all other prices careening wildly upward," President James G. Patton declared.

Patton attributed present high prices to two factors, "Congressional failure to deal with inflationary problems," and "enormous corporate profits."

T-H Act Changes Urged by NCWC

Negotiation Left

U. S. Powers Exhausted in Coast Strike

President Truman said at his news conference here yesterday that he was powerless to take further action in the West Coast maritime strike except through negotiation.

He made this remark when asked what action he contemplated in that case and in the New York truck strike.

Mr. Truman did not reply as to the New York strike, but he said he had taken every possible action under the law in the West Coast case.

The Government acted under the Taft-Hartley law last June to get a court order preventing a maritime strike for 80 days. That time limit expired yesterday, and the court in San Francisco dissolved the injunction.

The Administration is still trying to settle the walkout by negotiation, Mr. Truman said, but he has no emergency powers left.

Nearly 30,000 Workers Begin Coast Walkout

San Francisco, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Nearly 30,000 maritime workers today began a walkout that threatened to cripple Pacific Coast shipping for six months.

Some 12,000 CIO longshoremen and 16,000-odd seafarers belonging to four other unions, two of them CIO, began setting up picket lines and soup kitchens in all ports at 10:14 a.m. (1:14 p.m. EDT) in what stevedores' union chief, Harry Bridges, said would be "one of the toughest fights we've ever had."

William N. Margolis, assistant director of the United States Conciliation Service, called a meeting for 2 p.m. (5 p.m. EDT) between the Waterfront Employers' Association and Bridges' International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union "for the purpose of negotiating a settlement."

Employers agreed to attend, but Bridges said he had not received an official notice and could not commit his union.

The tieup, which will affect an estimated 550 foreign and American vessels and more than half a million workers in all, came after nearly three months of fruitless negotiations. The hiring hall setup was the crucial issue.

Railroads slapped an immediate embargo on all shipments destined for Pacific trade through West Coast ports to avoid tying up needed freight cars and prevent pileups of perishables and solids on wharves.

"It could easily last six months," Bridges said.

An injunction obtained under the Taft-Hartley Act June 15 to bar a strike for 80 days was dissolved in Seattle by Federal District Judge George B. Harris, who had signed the order in San Francisco.

Began at Midnight

Actually, paralysis began to creep along the 1800 miles of Pacific Coast waterfront at midnight when longshoremen, CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards and Marine Firemen (Ind.) quit their jobs to begin union meetings.

By today the five unions, all bound by a pledge to support the walkout until all have signed satisfactory contracts, had put the strike in high gear. Beside the ILWU, the Marine Cooks and the Firemen, the unions included the CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, which had reached an agreement with employers but refused to initial the contract, and the Marine Radio Officers, who are split in a jurisdictional feud between the AFL-IBEW and the CIO.

4 Children Die as Fire Destroys Log Home

Thomasville, N. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—Four children burned to death early today when fire destroyed the log home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stratton in a rural community near here.

Deputy Sheriff Burch Payne said Mrs. Stratton, who had been up most of the night attending one of the children who was ill, arose and lit an oil cook stove. She unintentionally dropped off to sleep, he said, but was awakened by the roar of fire sweeping the whole interior of the small home.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference said yesterday "there is reason to believe" that labor unions are doing more to drive Communists from their ranks than could be accomplished by "punitive legislation."

It also called on Congress to reconsider the Taft-Hartley Act and eliminate its "cumbersome and obstructive provisions."

The conference's social action department, in a special Labor Day statement, recommended that the Government create an industry council system of labor, management, agriculture and the professions to "plan for the common good of their respective interests."

As for communism, the conference said the labor movement admittedly has "its faults and imperfections," but added:

"There is reason to believe that its members and its leaders, for the most part, are themselves even more conscious of these defects than are its unfriendly critics.

"There is reason to believe, too, that these defects, e. g., Communist infiltration, are being remedied from within the movement itself more rapidly and more effectively than they could be remedied by punitive legislation."

The conference said the Taft-Hartley law has "socially beneficial features" which should be retained. But its "cumbersome and obstructive provisions concerning the labor movement itself" should be repealed, it said.

It went on to say that there are "certain economic and social abuses" which cannot await such a move, and "call for the immediate action."

"We refer particularly to the desperate need for Federal housing legislation, including a generous provision for the erection of low-cost public housing; for a substantial upward revision of the statutory minimum wage; and for an improvement in the benefits and an extension in the coverage of social security," the conference said.

New Proposals Voted

The Local 807 membership, after a vociferous mass meeting lasting all afternoon, voted to present a new set of proposals to the employers featuring a 25-cents-an-hour wage boost.

The proposals also included a demand for an employer-financed welfare fund based on 3 per cent of the payroll.

The local's rank-and-file voted down a 15 cents an hour hike just before the walkout started. This had been in an agreement negotiated by the union officers.

The new proposals call for strict observance of seniority in assignment of preferred equipment and a guarantee that truckers can "punch in" in the morning and "sign out" at night at the same place.

Locals 282 and 816 were loudly criticized at the meeting for not joining officially in the stoppage.

Later, it was announced that the new demands would not be transmitted to employers until tomorrow and the two groups would not get together to discuss the demands until Tuesday.

The city's one-billion-dollar a year garment business and large retail food chains apparently were the first to be hit by the stoppage.

There was no immediate shortage of food in the stores and few New Yorkers felt directly the pinch of the stoppage. Store stocks were estimated as ample for two to three weeks.

O'Dwyer won an agreement from the union yesterday that it would continue to transport food, perishable items, medicines, building supplies and other vital commodities.

Only slightly more than two thirds of Local 807's 13,000 members were involved now. There are about 40,000 Teamsters' Union truckers in the metropolitan area.

The embargo on much railroad freight destined for the city was certain to affect many industries in time. It was imposed yesterday.

New President Of AFGE Union

den made three promises, which were:

1. To launch a membership campaign to rebuild the union, which has lost members over the past few years.

2. To organize the national office on an efficient basis and to promptly look after the complaints and grievances of AFGE members.

3. To promote the legislative program as laid down by the convention.

The secretary-treasurer, Bernice B. Heffner, was reelected to a two-year term without opposition. She has held that post since 1935. A new slate of vice presidents was elected. It's composed of:

Floyd B. Swigget, jr., of Navy, and Charles R. Sharkey of Labor, both of Washington; John B. Murray of Boston, Henrietta Olding of New York, John J. Smith of Philadelphia, Frank H. Wright of Norfolk, H. B. Bannon of Ben Hill, Ga., Audrey K. Gardner of Cincinnati, John F. Griner of Chicago, John Walker of Oklahoma City, O. E. Eisenmenger of St. Paul, R. P. Sharp of Carville, La., Everett J. Strapp of Seattle, Howard C. Myers of San Francisco, and Henry J. Chase of the Canal Zone.

Schaefer Honored

Mike Schaefer of Washington, a long-time vice president who retired several years ago from the Navy, was made vice president emeritus in recognition of his service to the union.

The new president is a member of the Civil Service Commission board of appeals and review. He will retire on October 1 and take over active management of the union.

A native of Kentucky, Yaden taught school in that State and served in the State Legislature as a Republican before he went to Washington to make a career of the Federal service. His first job with Civil Service was as an examiner in mathematics.

The president and his executive council of vice presidents will meet tomorrow. At that time it is expected that a move will be made to ask the AFL for a loan to launch an organizing campaign.

The 1950 convention will be held at Omaha, Nebr.

Opposes Langer Bills

On legislative matters, the convention went on record as strongly opposed to the new Langer bills to overhaul the Federal pay structure. A resolution, unanimously adopted, said the measures would be "disastrous" to the average Federal worker. One of these bills would authorize local wage boards to fix the salaries of classified workers. Other resolutions called for:

Transfer to the Labor Department of the authority to fix local wage rates of per diem and unclassified employes; that the Hatch "no politics" act be amended to permit Federal workers to participate actively in local and State politics; that all employes be given the right to appeal job classifications to the Civil Service Commission; opposition to any plan to substitute a single administrator for the three-man and nonpartisan Civil Service Commission; medical and surgical treatment at Public Health Service hospitals for retired Federal workers, and that overtime be paid employes for work beyond eight hours in any one day.

tee to conduct this investigation in a fair and impartial manner on account of the prejudices they may have against our organization or members of our organization.

"Two years ago in Mr. Kersten's district members and leaders of our organization were extremely active against you in your campaign for election. And you spent some time at our Milwaukee convention, for what purpose I don't know but I have my suspicions."

Committee Counsel Irving J. McCann leaped to his feet and moved that Fitzgerald's statement be stricken from the record. This Kersten declined to do.

Fitzgerald then added that in Kearns' district a UEW member was the committee member's Democratic opponent.

The two-man subcommittee found Fitzgerald an elusive witness who managed to avoid committing himself on almost every subject except his own patriotism, about which the subcommittee had asked him no questions. He said that if "saboteurs and spies" infiltrated into his union they would be turned over to the FBI.

Pressed to say whether he thought the Communist Party was "just another political party" or an agent of Soviet Russia, he said he didn't know enough about the party to answer. When Kersten read at length from works of Joseph Stalin and Lenin to show they considered it "the general staff of the proletariat" in world revolution, he said he wasn't familiar with Stalin's writings and didn't want to be.

Fitzgerald was excused from the stand and the hearings adjourned until later this month when he explained he had to rush to New York to prepare for the UEW convention there next week. The Carey-Fitzgerald fight is expected to highlight the convention.

During his lengthy testimony yesterday Carey told the subcommittee Communist efforts to infiltrate the union had begun with its inception at Philadelphia in 1933. They were intensified when it was organized as an international union in 1936, he said and developed sharp differences among the leadership in 1939 after the Hitler-Stalin pact paved the way for World War II.

To his charges that employers favored Communists as union leaders, Fitzgerald snorted: "ridiculous" and once referred to electrical manufacturers as as "my fellow travelers." Carevy said one Rart Enright was fired at the Westinghouse plant at Jersey City, N. J., after he had unsuccessfully opposed Matles for organizational director last year. The company, he said, gave "absenteeism" as the reason.

There on Own Initiative

Fitzgerald retorted that Enright had been disciplined for absenteeism previously and that he was not a delegate to the 1947 convention but had gone on his own initiative. The company itself supported Fitzgerald, assuring the Associated Press at Jersey City that Enright had been fired for "persistent absenteeism and tardiness."

Carey named other UEW members he said were fired for anti-communism and two who were fired at the direction of the Navy Department as "subversive" when he personally knew they were not Communists.

Asked by Kersten how he could be sure those men were not Communists when he could not prove the union's officers were Communists, Carey said:

What Makes a Duck

"When someeone walks like a duck, swims like a duck and quacks like a duck, he is a duck."

Under questioning, he said that description applied, in addition to the three general officers of the union, to John T. St. Bernard, Neil Brandt, William Sentner and Ruth Young.

Carey said the fight within the union which culminated in his defeat by Fitzgerald in 1941 was based on interpretation of a clause in the union constitution. Under this clause, he explained, he ruled that a local could not amend its constitution to exclude Communists from membership but could do so to exclude them from holding office.

He said the majority of the executive board disagreed with his ruling and was upheld by a majority of the convention.

Washington Truckers Negotiating Contract

Contract negotiations were underway yesterday in the Washington trucking industry.

About 450 AFL teamsters continued on the job despite expiration of their working agreements with an estimated 22 companies August 31.

A. W. Stream, president of Local 639, AFL Teamsters International Union, expressed confidence an agreement will be reached without strike action.

State Funeral for Zhdanov

Moscow, Sept. 2 (AP).—Andrei A. Zhdanov was buried in the Kremlin wall tonight after one of the Soviet Union's most magnificent funerals.

Prime Minister Stalin, Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, Lavrenti P. Beria and other leading Politburo members and Soviet citizens personally bore the body to its resting place, and Molotov delivered the chief oration before a huge crowd which packed Moscow's Red Square.

(Molotov, Beria and Zhdanov all have been considered leading contenders to inherit Stalin's power.)

The body was carried to Red Square from the Hall of Columns, where more than one million Russians, pressing in a wide queue, had viewed the remains on its bier.

Stalin and the others mounted to the top of Lenin's tomb whence Molotov spoke on behalf of the Politburo and Council of Ministers in laudatory terms of the deceased.

The death of Zhdanov, a secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party who died Tuesday of heart trouble Molotov said, was a "great loss" to Russia.

Obviously referring to his leading role in organizing the Cominform, Molotov said Zhdanov had performed "glorious services in welding together the forces of the international anti-imperialist and democratic camp against all and sundry war incendiaries."

Following Molotov, G. M. Popov spoke on behalf of Moscow City, P. Popkov for Leningrad City, and Marshal L. A. Govorov for the Soviet army.

Following the orations there was a parade by troops of the Moscow garrison on through the square which was reviewed by Stalin and the others from the tomb.

The immense crowd stood at attention when funeral music announced the approach of the procession to the tomb.

Grand Jury Probe Sought On Mitchum

Hollywood, Sept. 2 (AP).—A grand jury investigation of the narcotics case involving Actor Robert Mitchum was called for today by District Attorney William E. Simpson.

The prosecutor said he asked the Los Angeles County grand jury's criminal complaints committee, headed by Leo Hubbard, to act in the matter. Hubbard said the committee will recommend the investigation to the full grand jury when it reconvenes Tuesday after a recess.

Mitchum, 31, and Actress Lila Leeds, 20; Dancer Vickie Evans, 25, and Robin Ford, 31, real estate agent, were arrested early yesterday in the midst of what police said was a marijuana smoking party at Miss Leeds' secluded hillside home. The four were released on $1000 bail each pending a habeas corpus hearing September 8.

Cleanup Preliminary

Police investigators declared the case was preliminary to a cleanup of the narcotics traffic in the film colony.

An industry spokesman, Dore Schary, declared in a statement, however, that "implications" against filmland generally are "untrue."

Schary, an M-G-M executive and chairman of the Motion Picture Industry Council representing the screen actors, directors and writers guilds, the Hollywood AFL Film Council, major studios and independent producers, said, in part:

"The published implications that a widespread or considerable use of narcotics exists in the motion picture industry are shocking, capricious and untrue.

"The accusations against one or two or even three individuals do not indict the entire working personnel of 32,000 well-disciplined and clean-living American citizens who labor in Hollywood in various capacities."

Lot of "Stuff" Used

Detective Sergt. Alva Barr, narcotics investigator, announced:

"We're going to clean the dope and narcotics users out of Hollywood. We don't care who we have to arrest. There's a lot of 'stuff' being used in Hollywood.

"Many of the big shots, stars and other top names, do not patronize corner peddlers for fear of a shakedown. However, we have reason to believe there is an 'inside ring,' right inside the film industry, supplying a large number of narcotics users."

Meantime, the district attorney's office indicated that formal complaints would be issued. Preliminarily, the quartet arrested early yesterday was booked on suspicion of violating the State and Federal narcotics laws.

Mitchum has the legal aid of Jerry Giesler, noted criminal lawyer.

D. C. Rates Far Better In Matter of Narcotics

Washington is not the happy hunting ground of drug peddlers and addicts it was several years ago, a Bureau of Narcotics spokesman said yesterday.

Several years ago the bureau singled out Washington as one of the worst narcotics centers in the country. But the situation here has improved considerably, the spokesman said. He attributed the improvement to "good enforcement."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Half-Brother of Gov. Jester Of Texas Reported Missing

New York, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—A 13-State alarm was broadcast by police today in an attempt to locate Claude W. Jester, 75, half-brother of the Governor of Texas, who has been missing since he left his furnished room last August 7.

Gov. Beauford Jester, here to attend an oil convention, asked officers to help locate his half-brother. Later, the Governor telephoned his office in Austin, Tex., that he had withdrawn the request, saying he merely wanted to make a "simple check" to determine if his brother might be ill.

Records showed that Claude Jester had been on relief rolls from March until June 25. Governor Jester said today he didn't know he was on relief and that he "still can't believe it."

Jester said he had wired the missing man to meet him when he arrived and was surprised when he was unable to locate him at the rooming house.

Chinese Anti-Hoarding Law Evaded by Carts

Shanghai, Sept. 2 (AP).—Ingenious Chinese merchants have found one way of beating Shanghai's strict anti-hoarding law.

Merchants who want to keep more than the three months supply of stocks allowed hire push cart owners to keep their goods moving around the streets until they are needed. So heavy has the traffic become that economic police today found 32 large warehouses empty

Russians Shot Down B-29 in Aug., 1945

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Soviet Yak fighters shot down an American B-29 over Korea on August 29, 1945—after hostilities had ended in the Pacific war—the United States Air Force disclosed yesterday.

Breaking the secrecy which has surrounded the Russian seizure of American Superfortress bombers during 1944 and 1945, the USAF gave an estimate of what Soviet designers may have learned from them in designing and building replicas for the Red air force.

At least 10 American bombers were seized by the Russians, it was said, most of them after they ran low on fuel or were damaged in raids on Japan and made forced landing in Soviet territory.

Soviet Copied B-29

Five were B-29s and all but one of them landed intact. The others were smaller craft which had been furnished the Russians under lend-lease. As the B-29s never were released to the USSR, Red plane designers built their Tupelov TU-70—a copy of the Superfortress—from these craft.

All members of the crew of the B-29 shot down over Korea escaped death and later a Soviet general apologized to the commander of the plane, the Air Force stated. Here's what they said happened:

A B-29 bomber from Saipan took off to drop supplies to American prisoners of war in an isolated POW camp near Kanko, Korea, while the occupation of Japan was underway, August 29. Two Yak fighters appeared as they were searching for the camp and at first waved friendly greetings, motioning them to follow.

Yaks Open Fire

The bomber, thinking the Russians were leading them to the camp, followed. But they circled over a small airfield and signaled for the B-29 to land. The field was too short for the craft and the plane commander refused. One of the Yaks then fired a shot across the American plane's nose. Obeying orders, the B-29 skipper then headed for home.

Chasing the high-speed bomber, the Yaks caught it and opened fire. A number of hits were scored and one engine caught fire, but the B-29 did not fire back. Six of the crew parachuted to safety and then the pilot landed the craft without further damage.

Soviet airmen removed papers and equipment from the craft, but later higher authorities helped the crew communicate with American headquarters and apparently at least some of it was returned. A United States repair plane flew in, but decided to salvage the B-29 rather than fly it out. The crew and "vital equipment" from the craft later were flown to Saipan.

Technical Questions Answered

Answering a series of questions put by reporters as to the technical lessons learned by the Russians from the seized B-29s, the Air Force said::

"A United States technical observer has stated his belief that the Russians could incorporate several of the new features of the B-29 into their opposite number, including superchargers. (These are boosters, giving the engines greater speed and rate of climb.)

"However, he does not think they can duplicate the extensive remote fire control equipment. (This enables one gunner to aim and fire 12 machine guns at enemy fighters.)

"He estimated that it took 20 months to build a production model of the B-29 using the Russian held models as a starting point for design. After delivery of the first production model it would take 12 months to achieve the rate of 150 a month. That would be 32 months after the first start, or April 1947, assuming that this work was commenced immediately after July 29, 1944, when the first B-29 fell into Russian hands, and that Russian industrial capabilities were equal to those of the United States—a tenuous assumption.

Bombers In Production

"It appears that there is a bomber and a transport version of the Tupelov TU-70 in production at present."

How long did it take the Soviet fliers to learn to handle the B-29s?

Morrow Starts Serving One Year After Paying Fine

After withdrawing his appeal iin Maryland Appellate Court, Annapolis, Wilburn E. Morrow, 53, of the 5900 block Harrison ave., Riverday, Md., yesterday entered the Maryland House of Corrections in Jessups, Md., to begin his one-year sentence for accepting a $2 racing bet.

The alleged "kingpin" of Montgomery County gamblers gave himself up Wednesday when he walked into the Montgomery sheriff's office in Rockville, and handed over a $1000 bill—the fine imposed on him along with the prison sentence in the Circuit Court in June.

Morrow's sentence is the maximum in Maryland for gambling. He was arrested August 16, 1947.

Sept. 26-Oct. 3 Designated as Religious Week

The District Commissioners yesterday designated the week beginning September 26 as Religious Education Week and asked rededication of District citizens "to the fulfillment of their duties in family and community life."

In a proclamation setting aside the period from September 26 through October 3 for the observance, the Commissioners stated, "The Nation will be strong enough to meet its opportunity and responsibility, only insofar as our cities and towns are filled with citizens who share the convictions of the pioneers who founded this Nation.

"We sincerely hope that the citizens and residents of this community will gather in their places of worship and in schools of religious education to study earnestly what God's purpose is for them. . . ."

Mediterranean Fleet Changes

The Navy disclosed yesterday that it is bringing its present Mediterranean Fleet home this month and replacing it with a slightly stronger naval force.

Sixteen ships, including the 45,000-ton aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt, will arrive at Gibraltar between September 10 and 23 to relieve 14 vessels now in the Mediterranean. Coming home with the latter will be a force of some 1100 Marines. They'll be replaced by "an equivalent number," the Navy said.

The announcement said the shift is in accordance with the established policy of rotating ships between the Atlantic and Mediterranean. Officials said there was no significance in the slightly stronger force en route East.

The new Mediterranean Fleet will be:

The carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt; the heavy cruisers Columbus and Albany; the light cruisers Providence and Little Rock; the destroyers Compton, Gainard, H. R. Dickson, the Hugh Purvis, Beatty, G. K. MacKenzie, E. G. Small, Power and Glennon; and the cargo ship Montague.

Public Health Program Asked by Truman

have challenged the Democrats to make the program an issue.

Ewing's report states that inability to pay for medical care is resulting in the unnecessary deaths of 325,000 Americans each year. Not only could these be averted, he says, but the program also would help save 4,300,000 man-years of work and 27 billion in national wealth he says are lost annually through sickness.

The health insurance and medical aid program, Ewing said, would help millions "meet the costs of health services." "Voluntary insurance plans can not do the job that has to be done," he declared.

The health insurance, to be financed by payroll taxes, was not covered in the cost estimates. Congress has refused consistently to enact such a compulsory health insurance program.

The insurance would cover doctor's bills, hospital costs, medicine and appliances. Later, probably at extra cost, dental care and home nursing would be provided.

Ewing listed the 10-year goals of the program as:

1. To increase professional manpower and training schools by 40 to 50 per cent.

2. Double the number of hospitals.

3. Add at least 600,000 of the 900,000 hospital beds needed.

4. Provide the public with adequate health services through a "system of insurance covering the entire population."

5. Vastly increase professional manpower and facilities for mental health cases, and promote research in psychiatry.

6. Control chronic diseases and relieve other physical, mental and social problems of adults.

7. Provide rehabilitation programs for 250,000 handicaped civilians.

8. Assure each child a "good start in life" through a national plan that would build progressively toward complete social, psychological and health services for all children and for mothers in childbirth.

9. Increase and improve medical research. By 1950 Federal non-military research should reach a total of 80 to 100 million dollars if enough qualified scientists are available.

10. Provide Federal assistance for citizen health councils in every community.

11. Provide Federal aid to help medical colleges train 227,000 physicians by 1960—an estimated 40 per cent increase over the number that will be turned out if the aid is not provided. This would cost 40 million dollars annually.

12. Increase the number of dentists from 75,000 now to 95,000 by 1960, about 6000 more than will be trained at the present rate.

To End Discrimination

13. End discrimination against Negro physicians and patients.

More Than Double

The $4,107,000,000 annual expenditure Ewing recommended is more than double the estimated $1,962,000,000 spent by Federal, State and local governments last year.

Ewing said that on the basis of present medical knowledge and skill, at least 120,000 of the 170,000 persons dying of communicable diseases, including pneumonia, each year, could be saved.

He added that:

Some 600,000 persons die of cancer and heart disease, but 115,000 of these deaths could be prevented.

Some 40,000 of the 100,000 deaths resulting from accidents are unnecessary, and 30,000 of the 110,000 infant and maternal deaths could be prevented.

An estimated 20,000 of the 400,000 persons who die each year of miscellaneous causes could be saved.

Fifth Can Afford Care

A scant one fifth of the population can afford all the medical care it needs, Ewing stated. Privately operated health insurance plans never will be within reach of more than half the population.

Ewing said the proposed Government-run program might start with coverage offered only to those workers now covered by social security.

It would be financed at the outset by a levy of from ½ to 1 per cent of the first $4800 earned. Later the tax might range up to 4 per cent as the services were expanded. Employer and employe each would pay half. They now contribute 1 per cent each on the first $3000 to defray social security costs.

Ewing stated that there are now only half enough hospital beds for proper care. He proposed doubling this by 1960 at a cost of nine billion dollars.

Ewing admitted the compulsory health insurance issue "is highly controversial."

But "every year the Nation loses 27 billion dollars in national wealth through sickness and partial or total disability," he argued.

Those in greatest need of help, he said, are in the low income groups—below $3000 a year. They are the ones, he said, who can't afford the voluntary plan.

His plan, he said, couldn't be called "socialized medicine." The patient would be allowed to choose his doctor. Any doctor, not on the Federal payroll, would have the right to reject any patient.

"Literally, the only change proposed by advocates of national health insurance is that, instead of the patient paying as he has money available, he would receive a service for which the doctor would be paid by the insurance system at a rate and by a method to which he had agreed," Ewing said.

"This is a thoroughly American system, resting upon insurance principles which have been part of our national fabric for generations."

Would Rest With States

Administration of the plan would rest with the States. The Government would handle only the finances. He denied that costs would be excessive or the quality of medical care lowered.

Senator Taft, an opponent of earlier Administration programs, issued the challenge to make a campaign issue of compulsory insurance. He was co-author of a Republican plan to give grants to States for medical care for people of low income, with no compulsory insurance payments.

No health plan came to a vote in Congress.

Ewing attacked the plea of "going ahead as we have in the past." "There are many earnest people who sincerely urge that course," he said.

"I cannot accept this thesis," he said. "We can improve the Nation's health markedly. What was good enough 30 or 40 years ago no longer is adequate."

The present system, he said, "is the system under which millions of our people are unable to obtain adequate medical care."

FCC Rebuked on Atheists

The Federal Communications Commission was rebuked by a special House investigation committee yesterday for a 1946 decision which many radio stations interpreted as an order to allot broadcasting time to atheists.

The committee, headed by Representative Forrest A. Harness (R., Ind.) approved a report demanding that FCC immediately rewrite the decision and remove the controversial language.

The committee said its full report will be issued later this week. It is based on two days of public hearings during which the decision was defended by the FCC and an atheistic organization and attacked by radio stations and religious groups.

FCC Commissioner Rosel H. Hyde told the committee yesterday that radio stations need fear no reprisals from the commission if they failed to grant broadcasting time for atheistic programs. But he defended the decision as intended to protect rather than throttle freedom of speech.

Committee sources said that unless the FCC eliminates disputed language from its decision, corrective legislation will be introduced at the next session of Congress.

The dispute stems from the so-called "Scott decision" handed down in 1946 in response to a petition by a California atheist who had been denied broadcasting time by three West Coast radio stations.

Sought Revocation

He appealed for revocation of their broadcasting licenses. The commission rejected that plea but issued a long and complicated ruling which stated in effect that atheists had the same right as religious groups to air their views.

Many broadcasting companies and religious organizations interpreted the decision as meaning radio stations had to give equal time for atheistic and religious programs.

Benes Yielded To Avert War, Prague Hears

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—President Eduard Benes accepted the Communist-dictated cabinet last February only to avert a civil war and warned the Communists they were destroying democracy, it was learned today.

This disclosure from an unimpeachable source came as Dr. Benes, no longer president, battled for his life at his country home at Sezimovo Usti.

The first act of the Communist regime, the informant said, was to withhold the following section of Benes' speech to Premier (now President) Klement Gottwald on February 25:

"Not all of the Czechoslovak people desire the destruction of democracy, but you gentlemen and the party led by you do desire that I should by my signature destroy democracy in Czechoslovakia and betray a promise not only dear to me, but to the whole nation, which lies in the words: 'President-liberator—we will remain loyal.'

I am doing this solely to prevent the civil war with which you threaten me and which you are capable of unleashing. However, I believe the Czechoslovak people will understand my act and that on the first occasion the majority of them will prove that the methods which you use are foreign to them and that you have underestimated the moral maturity, the loyalty and the democratic effort of our people."

one reason for the rather chilly atmosphere after yesterday's meeting was that General Robertson had found the Russians completely intransigeant in a point he tried to advance for negotiation. This unyielding attitude, according to these sources, came as something of a surprise to the entire British delegation.

The British had thought that since negotiations are in the framework of instructions passed on from the governments, the Russians here might be slightly more tractable than in the past.

Because of the Soviet attitude, Western negotiators here are doubtful that they can conclude their bargaining by the week's deadline which was suggested by the governments as a target date.

General Clay and his two Western colleagues are reporting back daily to their governments each phase of the negotiations. And it was learned that, so far as American negotiation is concerned, each important decision as to how much to concede and, above all, the valued judgment of whether the bargain at this level is worth the price asked by the Russians will be strictly Washington's affair.

Trade Agreement Sought

One major point which emerged today from the negotiations is that the western allies consider a workable trade agreement covering the western sectors of Berlin to be just as important as four-power control of the Berlin currency. If the recommendations of the western experts are accepted, the Soviet-sponsored mark will not be accepted as the Berlin currency unless the Russians agree to a satisfactory trade arrangement.

At Moscow, it has been agreed in principle that the Soviet mark would be used exclusively and the western mark withdrawn if certain other conditions, including four-power control of the Berlin currency, were fulfilled.

Teacher Fired In Baltimore

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. PHILIP FRANKFELD, wife of the head of the Maryland-District of Columbia Communist Party, has been fired from her job as teacher for a handicapped children's kindergarten in a Baltimore public school. The city's school board president said Mrs. Frankfeld's severance was routine after she had freely admitted membership in the Communist Party. She has been offered a hearing in the fall. Mrs. Frankfeld said, "I was dismissed and my case prejudged without any opportunity to speak on my behalf and for civil liberties . . ."

Firing Ceases In Jerusalem On U.N. Orders

Jerusalem, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Firing ceased abruptly at noon today in Jerusalem as both Arabs and Jews bowed to demands of United Nations senior observers.

The "truce within the truce" was accepted by Brig. Norman Lash, Arab Legion commander of the Jerusalem-Latrun area, and the Israeli senior liason officer here.

The Palestine truce—second agreed upon by Jews and Arabs—went into effect nearly two months ago, but sniping and shelling in the Holy City have been daily occurrances.

United Nations sources, meanwhile, said a special U. N. cameraman had filmed the scene in which two French observers were killed and an American pilot was injured during a flight over Gaza.

These films already have been flown to Lake Success, N. Y., the sources said. They said results of the top secret investigation of the incident will not be announced until Count Folke Bernadotte returns to Rhodes.

(In Paris, Bernadotte told newsmen he took "a very serious view" of attacks on U. N. personnel in Palestine. He flew later to Geneva, en route to Rhodes.)

Top U. N. observers gathered in Jerusalem for a meeting tomorrow with Jews and Arabs on the evacuation of all forces from the "Hill of Evil Counsel" and the setting up of a neutral Red Cross zone there.

Unconfirmed news reports at Beirut, Lebanon, claimed 112 Jews were killed during the last 24 hours in an attack on the Arab settlement of Al Manara, on the Lebanese-Palestine frontier.

Authoritative sources said the Jewish underground Irgun Zvai Leumi and Stern forces will merge with the Israeli army next week.

Howe Quits Board Race In Arlington

H. Herbert Howe, Federal Government worker living in Arlington, yesterday withdrew from the November 2 race for the Arlington County Board and announced he expected to vote for I. Lee Potter whom he had opposed.

He said Potter had written him a letter modifying his previous stand on zoning, the principal issue on which they had disagreed. Potter is an Arlington builder.

Howe, employed by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and president of the Home Protective Association, a group seeking improved Arlington zoning, entered the board race, protesting county independents had put up "no suitable candidate."

When the Arlington Better Government League and the Arlington Citizens Committee for School Improvement indorsed Potter, he resigned from both groups.

His withdrawal leaves four contenders, including Potter, for the one board seat. The other candidates are: Board incumbent Alfred E. Frisbie, stockbroker and the Democratic nominee, and independents Francis J. Clair, freelance writer, and Jacob Bechtel, retired carpenter.

Arlington Boy Winner in Coaster Race

Fourteen-year-old Russell Sheets, 919 N. Randolph st., Arlington, yesterday won undisputed first place in the first northern Virginia coaster car contest.

Sheets

He took first place in a special run-off of the powerless midget cars held after the winner in the original races on August 14 had been found to be from Takoma Park, Md. The race, judges explained, was open only to boys living in northern Virginia.

Young Sheets coasted down the 975-foot course on S. 23d st. near Arlington Ridge rd. two lengths ahead of his nearest rival, Edward Diehl, 3610 Lee blvd., Arlington.

He bested the winner of the Class "B" age group, Joel L. Moyer, 12, of 5710 N. 25th st., Arlington, by a good four lengths in a separate heat.

Sheets will receive a fully-equipped English racing bike in ceremonies at noon Monday at Arlington County Courthouse. Expected to be present at the ceremony will be the original Maryland winner, Matthew Boring, jr., of 7723 Eastern ave., Takoma Park.

hammers, chisels and crowbars to open safes on the post. On one occasion, when a safe proved to be too difficult to open on the post, a private car was used to transport it to a spot near Richter's home in Johnstown, Pa., where they opened it.

Break in the case came when the Belvoir provost marshal, Major Ramsey, and CID Agent Capt. W. J. Curley, persuaded Hanna to submit to a lie detector test on Wednesday night. Five CID men worked on the case. Post officials said the test resulted in a full confession. Hanna said Pfc. Bobo was present on only two of the raids.

The soldiers who have made full written confession got their biggest "take" when they robbed a civilian collector of $1500 as he mounted the steps of the main Post Exchange building, guarded by a military policeman.

Post officials said the men admitted using gloves in all their robberies. Hanna was quoted as saying he used his money to purchase an automobile, and to counteract the high cost of living. Richter was quoted as saying that he used his share of the loot to "play a big shot" in Washington.

The men did not keep much of the merchandise which they scooped up during their robberies, post officials said. Most of it was dumped in the river, although the provost marshal and Captain Curley recovered three fountain pens, one ladies' wrist watch and two mechanical pencils after the arrests. None of the cash was recovered.

The men now are in custody of police of the Military District of Washington awaiting formal charges.

Woman Confesses Killing Son, 10, Daughter, 11

Grants Pass, Oreg., Sept. 2 (U.P.). A blonde 11-year-old girl and her 10-year-old brother were found stabbed to death with a butcher knife in a bed in an auto court bed today and their mother confessed killing them to Portland police, authorities announced.

Francis Irene McCurdy, 38, Gold Hill, Oreg., was arrested at the Portland bus depot and told police she gave her daughter, Pamela Rose, and son, Paul Bennard, six sleeping pills each last night and stabbed them while they were unconscious. She said she telephoned police today, suggesting they investigate the auto court room.

Mrs. McCurdy said she killed her children because she didn't have enough money to buy food for them.

Vienna Feels Pact With Russia Likely

Post Reporter

(This is the sixth in a series of articles by a Post reporter who recently returned from western Europe.)

We probably can get the Russians to agree to an Austrian treaty now—if we really want one.

This was the confident belief expressed in Vienna last month by officials of the three western allies and by competent Austrian observers as well.

The belief was so confident—and so surprising against the background of the east-west struggle in Berlin and elsewhere—that I asked officials in Paris, London and Washington whether they agreed.

The answer in all three capitals showed willingness to take another look at the Austrian treaty problem as soon as the Berlin blockade is lifted. Officials in each capital were skeptical of the prospects, but they agreed Europe could gain more from an Austrian treaty than from any other single step open to western diplomacy at this time.

A treaty with Austria would end the four-power occupation which little Austria has carried on its back for the past three years. It would mean the withdrawal of Soviet troops from one of the points of their deepest penetration into western Europe, and would remove the legal excuse for keeping Soviet troops in Hungary and Romania.

Above all, an Austrian treaty would show that the east-west deadlock was not complete, and that the two sides were still able to negotiate and to withdraw from fixed positions.

What the Russians think about it is, of course, a determining factor, although some individuals in each of the western allied governments would rather have no treaty at all than remove western troops from Austria at this time.

Treaty Held Likely

In Vienna, however, there is sturdy confidence that the Russians are ready to agree to a treaty, and for three main reasons.

The first is that the factories and other enterprises taken over by the Russians in eastern Austria are physical and financial wrecks. The Russians have not known how to manage them or maintain them. The plants are deteriorating fast, and the Russians might be willing to be bought out—for a price.

The second reason is the rift between the Cominform and Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. Before Tito committed his heresy against Moscow, the Russians backed him through thick and thin in his demand for a slice of Austrian territory in Carinthia. Now, it is thought in Vienna, the Russians are ready to abandon Tito's claim, which has been one of the worst stumbling blocks in the negotiations over Austria for the past three years.

The third reason cited in Vienna is less tangible, but understandable to anyone who hears the Viennese tell of the murder, rape and pillage in the months when their city was in undivided Soviet control.

The longer Soviet troops stay on Austrian soil, it is argued, the worse are Communism's prospects of winning the Austrian people. The Red Army has not been an effective agent of Communism in Austria, and there are signs that the Russians know it.

Once the troops get out, the Russians may feel they will have an easier task in undermining Austria's stanchly anti-Communist government which, by then, would no longer have the protection and encouraged of Western allied armies.

Whether this reasoning is sound, and whether it really represents the Soviet viewpoint, is a question that can be debated endlessly. The facts worth reporting are that informed sources in Vienna believe it to be sound, and that the Western governments are ready to test its soundness if they can first patch up an agreement with the Russians in Berlin.

The last negotiations for an Austrian treaty dragged on from February 20 to May 6 of this year. The prospect of starting another effort gives cold shivers to any of the unhappy Western officials who struggled through the last one.

Yet the meetings ended without a final break and subject to recall. It was left to Samuel Reber, Secretary Marshall's deputy for Austria who happened to be in the chair on the last day, to call a new meeting when there was evidence to justify new negotiations. At the moment there is no evidence except a strong belief in Vienna, and a vague hope elsewhere, that a new push might succeed.

(Another article in this series will appear tomorrow)

5 New Stations To Open for Registration

Five police stations will be added to the Selective Service registration places, beginning Saturday, it was announced yesterday following a conference between William E. Leahy, District draft director, and Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett.

Deputy Director Frank D. Norton explained that the precinct stations are strategically located to complement the fire stations already being used for registration. Policemen who can be spared will be concentrated at the five precinct stations.

The police stations to be used from Saturday through the end of registration on September 18 are as follows:

No. 6 Precinct, 13th and Nicholson sts. nw.; No. 8, 42d and Albemarle sts. nw.; No. 9, 525 F st. ne.; No. 11, Chicago and Nichols aves. se., and No. 13, 9th and U sts. nw.

Registration continued to flow smoothly in Greater Washington yesterday, without long waiting lines or other delay reported to headquarters.

The 23-year-olds had their first day yesterday, and will continue to sign up today. At the four city-wide registration centers, a total of 696 registered yesterday.

14,400 Homes Begun in 1948 In D. C. Area

An estimated 14,400 new homes were started in the Washington area during the first seven months of 1948, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said yesterday.

The number of new family dwelling units was 38 per cent higher than for the corresponding months of 1947, when 10,500 units were started, the bureau said.

More than half of all new dwellings started during the 1948 period were rental-type units, it was reported, in contrast to only 40 per cent in the 1947 period.

Average construction cost for single-family homes, according to builders' estimates, was $10,700 for the 1948 period, as contrasted with $9,300 for the corresponding 1947 period.

This may reflect not only the rise in construction costs since last year, the Bureau said, but also the fact that more expensive types of family dwellings are being constructed.

The average construction cost for multi-family dwellings also rose slightly to $6700 per unit as compared with $6,400 last year.

Millions of women who serve margarine proudly on their tables say...

UNTIL THE LAW LETS US BUY YELLOW NUCOA*

WE'LL COLOR IT AT HOME THE BEST WAY...

by NUCOA'S "Bowl Mix"

BECAUSE it protects the fine flavor and texture that make Nucoa our favorite margarine!

You're right, ladies! We tolerate no short-cuts on quality in the making of Nucoa, so why should you tolerate them in coloring Nucoa for your table? Nucoa is churned, chilled, made into pounds and luxuriously triple-wrapped, so that it comes to you with the finest churn-fresh flavor, the smoothest churn-fresh texture any spread can have. It is not melted and poured into any trick coloring package, because we know you would not like the flavor and texture of delicious Nucoa impaired in this way.

BECAUSE we get the best margarine this way—at less cost!

Right again! If you buy margarine in a trick coloring package, you pay extra for the package. When you buy Nucoa, you buy its finer flavor, its year-round churn-fresh goodness, its rich food energy and dependable Vitamin A. You get the margarine you're proudest to put on your table—actually cheaper! What could be better?

BECAUSE we find it as quick as any way —and so much more appetizing!

Yes, ladies! Just let Nucoa stand at room temperature until it is soft—not soupy, but soft enough for quick sandwich spreading. Then remove it from the package to a large bowl and with a large fork or spoon cream in the coloring shaken from the pure color wafer. It takes less than a minute and a half to mix the color in evenly—and no other method is quicker than this; no other method so well protects the texture!

Obtainable yellow (where not prohibited by state law) at higher cost, to cover high Federal taxes and license fees.*

Party Expels Dixiecrats

der the name of States Rights Party, or Dixiecrats, has bolted the Democratic Party. Neither they nor their leaders can be recognized as Democrats any more than Henry A. Wallace and his Progressive Party can be considered Democrats. Both the Dixiecrats and the Wallaceites have one thing in common—the aid and comfort they are giving to the Republican Party. The Dixiecrats are a fourth party movement, deliberately designed by their leaders to aid the Republican Party.

"I am confident the action you are taking in South Carolina is the beginning of a repudiation by the people all over the South of the bolters who rule the Dixiecrats."

Primm, himself an Alabaman opposed to the civil rights program, but committed to party regularity and the Truman-Barkley ticket, reputedly acted with carte blanche authority from Chairman McGrath.

Talked to Dixie Leaders

He himself had just returned from talks with Southern leaders in South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and other disaffected States. He reported to McGrath that a large and possibly controlling majority of voters in most of the Southern States wanted to vote "regular" for the Truman-Barkley ticket, but would have no opportunity to do so under Dixiecrat machine control.

In an authorized interview before he left Washington for his home in Rhode Island, McGrath said the party itself is not "writing off" or "throwing out" supporters of the Dixiecrat slate. He said they themselves will be "automatically" leaving the party if they support anyone other than President Truman.

Rule for Party Regularity

"If they are going to support the Thurmond-Wright ticket, they are leaving the Democratic Party," McGrath said. "Only those who support Mr. Truman for President and Senator Barkley for Vice president can consider themselves Democrats."

He said the national committee is in communication with "substantial groups of good, loyal Democrats in these (Southern) States trying to work out—under the laws of each State—means by which Democrats can vote for the regular Democratic nominees."

At Wednesday's meeting of the South Carolina State executive committee, State Chairman William P. Baskin contended the South Carolina party remains in the Democratic Party even though its electors were pledged to the States' Rights ticket, the Associated Press reported from Columbia.

But Primm's wire yesterday definitely banished that illusion.

Thurmond Replies

Last night Governor Thurmond said at Columbia, S. C., according to the Associated Press, that the Southern Congressman who supports Mr. Truman in November is "a dead duck."

"Any member of Congress who supports so-called civil rights by supporting (President) Truman will be uselessly sacrificing himself with his own people," Thurmond said in a statement.

"Senators and Congressmen in the South are elected by their own people—not by Chairman McGrath."

"They will not be dictated to by a New Englander, who has himself bolted the Democratic Party by violating its basic principles of States' Rights.

"But I do not believe he will be able to persuade many Southern Senators and Congressmen to support his Anti-Southern candidate, after they fought that candidate's Un-American proposals in the recent special session (of Congress)."

Former Gov. Ransome J. Williams, however, issued a statement saying: "I believe in the (Democratic) Party that has been in existence for 126 years, and I intend to remain in that party."

W. Austin Seay, director of the Washington office of the States Rights Democratic Party, said the national committee action was expected and predicted it would "consolidate" the Dixiecrats.

Manila, Sept. 2 (AP).—A continuing volcanic eruption on the little island of Camiguin had driven more than 3000 residents to refuge on nearby Mindanao today.

is mistaken about Communists in Government.

There have never been many Communists found in the Federal service and those few have been discharged long ago, he told reporters. He stressed that a program to remove disloyal persons has been underway since the start of World War II.

The President laughed and said he thought Mr. Dewey's intentions are to remove Democrats from the Federal service, not Communists.

The questioning inevitably got around to politics and Mr. Truman was asked if he expected a more cordial reception in the South than was given Henry Wallace.

The President said, of course, he will get a cordial reception, wherever he goes, but smilingly asked reporters to make no comparisons.

He said he will stop everywhere he can in his travels, and hopes to go to the South, though he couldn't say just when.

Asked if he had further comment on the Southern egging of Wallace he said he stood on the statement released by Presidential Secretary Charles Ross that he considered the pelting of Wallace "un-American business."

He threw this scant new light on his campaign plans:

He will go to Des Moines, Iowa, as well as Dexter, Iowa, in mid-September, but is not ready to announce further campaign bookings. Dexter is just outside Des Moines.

He will go into his home State of Missouri, and close his campaign there, probably in his hometown of Independence as usual.

Present plans call for stops in Kansas City and St. Louis, but they are subject to change without notice. He definitely plans a speech in Chicago, but he wouldn't say when.

He laughed and said it was difficut to make binding plans because he is being asked to schedule every whistle stop and he wants to stop at all of them. A reporter said whistle stops don't like to be called whistle stops. Maybe that was true of San Francisco and Seattle, Mr. Truman smiled.

His present intentions are to do most of his campaigning by train.

MRS. RUTH ERICKSEN, a long-time Republican grandmother who operates a resort inn near Odessa, N. Y., which specializes in breast of guinea hen and salad with a secret dressing, called on President Truman yesterday and told him she was turning Democrat. Her reason, she said, was because "all they (the Republicans) did in Congress was send prices up 100 per cent" and that she has "grown tired of presenting bills to my guests that look like the national debt." Mrs. Ericksen termed the Chief Executive "the housewife's only friend." She holds a pen bearing the inscription: "I swiped this from Harry Truman" of substituting "prejudice for reason" in dealing with Negroes.

Wallace Talk Cancelled on Police Advice

The presidential candidate of the Progressive Party made his broadcast this morning at Jackson, Miss., after a train journey from Alabama. It was in Jackson that the revolt against President Truman's civil rights program was organized some months ago and given the momentum that resulted in the States' Right (Dixiecrat) Party.

Governor Wright, the vice presidential nominee of that party, went into action early this week after Wallace had been bombarded with eggs and tomatoes in North Carolina. He cautioned the people of Mississippi against such conduct when Wallace got to their Stae.

"We should treat any visitor in out State hospitably," Governor Wright said.

He provided Wallace with an escort of five highway patrol cars today as he traveled from Jackson to Vicksburg. No other State had done half as much.

In Vicksburg, which still bears marks of a famous Civil War siege, Wallace made his one public appearance in Mississippi. He spoke outside the courthouse before an unsegregated crowd of 200. There was one would-be heckler in the crowd, but he was suppressed by Police Chief L. C. Hicks before Wallace began speaking.

It was this way. Peter Seeger, Wallace's troubador, went before the sidewalk microphone with his guitar. He suggested to the crowd that it would be a good thing if all joined in a song.

A sullen looking youth snapped out, "Dixie."

To his astonishment, Seeger went into Dixie. He knew every word of it, and played and sang it with gusto.

The would-be heckler was furious, and began muttering. Police Chief Hicks moved alongside and told him to sit down and keep quiet. He did.

Wallace talked briefly to the crowd about cotton and about building up the South. He then got into his car, and the caravan drove over a bridge spanning the Mississippi and moved into Louisiana.

Wallace awoke around 5 o'clock this morning aboard his special railroad car. He and members of his party drove from Jackson to Edwards and had breakfast at the Southern Christian Institute, a Negro institution. There were no eggs, the main dish being creamed chip beef.

An impromptu convention of the Progressive Party of Mississippi was held at the breakfast and Wallace and Taylor electors chosen.

Later, Wallace drove to the State Capitol and presented a petition asking that these electors be placed on the Mississippi ballot for the November 2 election.

In a radio broadcast later, Wallace referred to a speech by Governor Wright in which Wright said if Negroes didn't like it in Mississippi, 'they could move on to some other State.

"I say that this proposal is a [illegible]able substitution of prejudice for reason," Wallace told his audience.

...gressive Candidate ...s Mob Stoned Him

Mount Vernon, Ill., Sept. 2 (AP).—Curtis MacDougall, Progressive candidate for the United States Senate, reported today that a mob stoned him and his political caravan near West Frankfort, Ill., a coal mining town.

MacDougall, a Northwestern University journalism professor, said police had not given his party any protection. E. B. Ragland, West Frankfort police chief, said his reports showed "only that a bunch of fellows broke up the meeting because they apparently did not like what was being said."

MacDougall's Account

MacDougall gave this account:

He was struck by at least 10 stones. His wife and children were threatened with violence. Prof. William T. Starr, also of Northwestern, was struck by a stone, and Florence Cowgeil of Argo, a Chicago suburb, was "slugged" in the face when she stepped in front of MacDougall during the stoning.

"We had a permit for the gathering," MacDougall said.

"When the rioting started there were several calls put through to the police station. One of our party, Bernie Asbell, our folk singer, finally broke through and went to the police station and demanded an escort to the city line.

Told to Get Out

"The police told him they had no information of a public gathering permit, and the desk sergeant —I don't know his name—told Asbell 'we don't like you any better than they do. Get out of town.'

"As they were talking the mob stormed the police station, yelling and screaming. There were about 100 of them. The desk sergeant said finally, 'Oh Hell, to get rid of you I'll drive you to the city line myself.'

"We had started driving out meantime. A lot of the mob formed a parade of their cars in back of the police car. The police car turned back at the city line. The parade of cars kept after us."

MacDougall said it was then the mob threatened his wife and 4-year-old daughter, Priscilla, and stoned him and his party.

Truman Partly to Blame For Eggs, Taylor Says

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 2 (AP).—Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) told reporters today that two men who threw eggs and peaches at his automobile in Rexburg, Idaho, are "not entirely to blame."

Taylor said President Truman "started the whole thing with his remark 'Why doesn't Wallace go back to Russia?'"

Two World War II veterans, Jerry Brian and Harold Butler, were charged at Rexburg with disturbing the peace for hurling peaches and eggs at Taylor.

The Idaho Senator stopped here en route to Portland, Oreg., to continue his tour as vice presidential candidate on Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party ticket.

Aged Couple, Daughter Die as Fire Razes Home

Chillicothe, Mo., Sept. 2 (AP).—An aged couple and their daughter perished early today in a fire which destroyed their three-room home 6 miles southeast of here.

The victims were John Miller, 81, a retired farmer and dairy operator; his wife, Mrs. Anne Brenneman Miller, 79, and their daughter, Miss Mary Miller, 40.

U. S. Planning To Deport 25 Top Reds

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Justice Department said today it will soon start proceedings to deport 25 top-ranking Communists.

Among those facing the proceedings is Jacob (Jack) Stachel, 49-year-old educational secretary of the United States Communist party.

He is also one of the 12 party leaders arrested in July for allegedly advocating the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Announcement that the deportation hearings will get under way soon was made at the end of a similar hearing against "J. Peters," alleged chief of a Communist underground operating in this country.

John P. Boyd, deputy commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Justice Department, said that proceedings will start shortly against Stachel, Alexander Bittelman, Communist theoretician; Claudia Jones, and 22 others.

The names of all 25 were not disclosed.

The Justice Department will ask their deportation on the grounds that they advocate forcible overthrow of the Government.

Of the 12 top Communists arrested in July for allegedly advocating overthrow of the Government, two besides Stachel had been arraigned earlier for deportation hearings.

They are John B. Williamson, party trade union secretary, and Irving Potash, a national committee member and manager of the CIO Furriers Joint Council in New York.

Peters, who remained silent throughout the deportation hearing against him, issued a statement late today saying "for many years I was an active member of the Communist party and elected to various committees, all of which is public record."

During the hearing, he refused to answer questions on constitutional grounds.

Peters' attorney, Mrs. Carol King, issued his statement. She told newsmen later that Peters was the author of a pamphlet, "The Communist Party, a Manual of Organization."

Mrs. King also said he has used the name "Peters." During the hearings, he refused to say if he had been known by that name.

She said his name was Alexander Goldberger when he came to this country, but he is now known as Alexander Stevens. He is a native of Czechoslovakia.

Peters' statement also assailed a subcommittee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, before which he appeared Monday. He accused the committee of "feeding new spy scares and frameups to the country."

ring is suspected of having gone after top-secret wartime information on the A-bomb.

These sources said the committee is interested in the efforts of the Soviet spies to get in touch with American scientists who worked on the atomic project.

The Army, which controlled the project during the war, has been asked to provide a liaison officer to aid the inquiry. Committeemen said one witness will be Elizabeth T. Bentley, the confessed former Communist agent who already has sworn that a wartime red network operated here.

"Miss Bentley has considerable information on wartime industrial espionage," one member said.

One of the scientists who has come to the committee's attention is now a professor at a Midwestern University. He allegedly was fired from the wartime atomic project after the FBI investigated him in 1945. At that time, he was working at the atomic laboratory in Berkeley, Calif.

During the founding conference of the United Nations early in 1945, he was trailed by the FBI to a restaurant in downtown San Francisco, where he was overheard conferring with two members of the Soviet delegation.

The scientists was kicked off the project, but no further action was taken against him, informed sources said.

The second nuclear scientist, fired for security violations, also worked at the Berkeley laboratory, these informants said.

They said the Russians are reported to have obtained general information on the nature of the "Manhattan Project," as the wartime A-bomb program was called, and on precautions taken to protect atomic energy workers from the destructive effects of radio-active materials.

Plan Announced to Screen Disloyal Men in Services

Defense Secretary Forrestal yesterday announced the formulation of a coordinated program to screen out and eliminate disloyal persons in the armed forces.

He made public the recommendations of the Armed Services Personnel Board calling for the close cooperation of all investigation agencies of the Government in routing out subversive persons in the ranks. Details of the plan, which is being studied by the Secretaries of Army, Navy, Air Force and Treasury before going to Forrestal for approval, were published in The Washington Post yesterday.

Under the program, men charged with an overt act of disloyalty will be court-martialed or tried by civil court. Those determined to be "disloyal" after investigation will be discharged "under other than honorable conditions." Where there is strong suspicion but no proof of "subversive affiliations," a man will be kept in service but watched and put where he can do no damage. The announcement made no direct statement that Communists inducted under the draft will be discharged, but it is understood that where membership is proved that will constitute disloyalty.

Dr. Woolley, Biochemist, Wins Award

Winning honors for scientific achievements has become almost a habit to Dr. Dilworth Wayne Woolley, physically handicapped biochemist and authority on vitamins.

Dr. Woolley

Dr. Woolley, associate member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York, received his fifth and latest award at sessions of the American Chemical Society which ended its 114th national meeting here yesterday.

He accepted the honor, the $1000 Eli Lilly & Co. Award in Biological Chemistry, with but one show of pride, a flush of gratitude at the statement that he had been selected "on an achievement basis only" with no consideration of his disability.

Seeks No Favors

Sensitive to sympathy, he seeks no favors.

Dr. Woolley, son of an American farmer who moved to Canada, was born in Raymond, Alberta, on July 20, 1914. He lived a normal youth, pursued normal activities, and attended the University of Alberta for his educational foundation in scientific research.

He won his bachelor of science degree there in 1935; his master of science degree there in 1936. And then he came to United States to take up post-graduate work at the University of Wisconsin. Even while disability was overtaking him, he won his doctor of philosophy degree there, in 1938.

Dr. Woolley is blind. He has been totally blind since 1939, even before he accepted a position with the Rockefeller Institute to do research on vitamins and anti-vitamins. Doctors, he said, could not tell him the cause of his loss of sight in two short years.

Other Honors Won

But just before and since then, he has successively won:

First award of the Society of Biological Chemistry, and its accompanying honorarium, attendance at the 1938 International Physiological Congress, in Europe.

The Eli Lilly & Co. award in bacteriology, in 1940, for his work on nutritional requirements of bacteria.

The Mead-Johnson award on nutrition, in 1948, for his investigations into water soluble vitamins.

An American Pharmaceutical Manufacturers award, early this year, for his studies on anti-metabolites.

And this week's award for continuing vitamin research.

Dr. Woolley pursues his scientific activities with the aid of two laboratory assistants who perform the routine tasks. They report their observations to him, and he uses such data to direct experiments, plan future procedure and develop his own conclusions.

He has one other helpmeet, a friend of Wisconsin University days. She is Mrs. Janet Woolley, bacteriologist and graduate of Wisconsin University, who gave up her own career to help his. They were married three years ago.

Tests With Enzymes Open New Field of Cancer Research

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Test-tube discovery of life's process of changing fats to human energy was reported out here yesterday by a 31-year-old, prize-winning biochemist.

The discovery, still in basic research, may open new approaches to attack cancer, hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure, liver ailments and other ills which may be traced to faulty metabolism, it was said.

Already the findings are being pursued in cancer research, said the body chemistry scientist, Dr. Albert L. Lehninger of the University of Chicago departments of surgery and biochemistry.

Dr. Lehninger Describes Findings

Recipient this year of the Paul-Lewis Laboratories Award in Enzyme Chemistry, Dr. Lehninger described his findings to a closing session of the American Chemical Society, at Hotel Statler.

Until his recent experiments, he said, the activities of enzymes, chemical regulators of life processes, were obscured because they could not fully be studied outside the living cell. They did not work under microscopes as scientists knew they must work in the body, he said.

Largely by trial and error methods, Dr. Lehninger said, he hit upon the solution. It came following the realization that enzymes, which he termed "cellular power plants," needed the "spark" of coenzymes to keep them operating, and that this spark was lost in preparation of the enzymes for laboratory study.

Processed Liver Tissue

"In the absence of any one of its components (coenzymes), the enzyme system is inactive," declared Dr. Lehninger.

Dr. Lehninger told how he processed liver tissue to obtain separately enzymes and their component coenzymes, put the two together, and reactivated operation of the "power plants."

Now that this has been done, he told questioners, this vital life process can be studied more completely. It is plausible, he said, that once normal operation of enzymes is fully charted, the deviations from normal that result in human ills can be corrected by fortifying weaknesses, arresting over-activities or otherwise correcting imbalances of the enzyme system.

Cancer, hypertension, arteriosclerosis and fatty degeneration diseases are all either known or believed by many to be related in some way to faulty metabolisms, or conversion of body food to body energy, he explained.

"These investigations," he declared, "represent only a beginning toward a complete understanding of the enzymes and mechanism of fatty acid oxidation, but with the finding that this process can be studied free of the intact cell, such

Discusses Amino Acids

In another section meeting of the society, Dr. E. E. Howe of Merck & Co., Inc., Rahway, N. J., spoke on potentialities for the manufacture of amino acids, the constituents of proteins.

He termed "quite probable" that supplementation of lysine and perhaps other amino acids with hog-feeding rations "will materially reduce the amount of grain required in their feeding to produce a given weight gain."

Importance of this, he said, would be to release grain for export, and help this country's program to aid in recovery of world economy.

Dr. Robert S. Shelton of the William S. Merrill Co., of Cincinnati, told members attending a meeting of the society's division of medicinal chemistry of a new drug, Decapryn Succinate, for treating hay fever and other allergies.

Like several other marketed drugs, it is designed to combat histamine, which scientists say is released in body tissues when a sensitive sufferer contacts an allergy-producing material, Dr. Shelton said.

800 Teachers To Meet Today

School programs for the coming year will be discussed today by Prince Georges County teachers and principals at meetings that will begin at 9:30 a. m.

More than 700 teachers in the county's white schools will meet at the Bladensburg Elementary School, where they will hear a talk by Dr. Paul S. Douglass, president of American University, during the morning session.

At the same time about 100 Negro teachers, meeting at North Brentwood Elementary School, will be addressed by Dr. William M. Cooper, director of summer school and extension activities at Hampton (Va.) Institute.

During the afternoon, teachers and principals at both schools will be divided into groups for discussion of curricula and other activities. All teachers will report to their respective schools next Tuesday morning to organize their programs, and classes will begin the following day.

Overcrowding Of Arlington Schools Cited

The Dominion Hills community in Arlington—which has no public school of its own—could use a six-classroom elementary school when classes begin September 14, and will need a 13-room school by 1954.

This estimate, based on a recent school census, was made by the Arlington School Board yesterday to illustrate present and future school overcrowding.

On September 14, the board will hold a public hearing to set the exact amount of a proposed bond issue for school construction. The issue, expected to be between two and five million dollars, will be put before voters in a referendum November 2.

Roughly 184 Dominion Hills elementary pupils now attended Walter Reed Sshool, about a ½ mile away, and Stonewall Jackson School, nearly a mile away, the board pointed out. Both Walter Reed and Stonewall Jackson schools are overcrowded, the board added.

The school census shows Dominion Hills has 520 dwelling units with 483 preschool children who will enter Arlington public schools within the next five years.

Census figures indicate the area will have 269 children attending elementary schools by next March, or enough to warrant construction of an 8 or 10 room school.

According to a recent estimate by Arlington School Consultant Edward J. Braun, a 10-room school building, with cafeteria, auditorium and playroom, would cost about $400,000.

Compared with today's 184 Dominion Hills public schools students, the board estimates there will be 382 by 1951; 391 by 1952; 450 by March, 1953, and 491 by 1954.

Negro Newspaper In N. Y. Bought By Englishman

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—The New York Age, one of the oldest Negro newspapers in America, has been purchased by a white Englishman who says he wants to "improve the lot of the Negro in particular and of minority groups in general."

The buyer is Richard Bourne-Vanneck of London, who said today his American-born wife, the former Victoria Thomas, is of Negro parentage.

Bourne-Vanneck said he hopes to make the Age, now a weekly, a daily appealing to whites and Negroes alike. Fo rthe first time in the paper's history, it will hire white staff members, he said.

Bourne-Vanneck said the politics of his paper, formerly Republican, will be "Progressive" in the sense that it will be "modern in outlook."

Charles A. Beard

For a large part of his life Prof. Charles A. Beard was the darling of the American radicals. His approach to history was, like that of the Marxists, primarily economic; but unlike the Marxists he was able to write of economic history in a lively and epigrammatic manner that made him a delight to read. He was even able to impart to it the character of melodrama, for, like the late Prof. Vernon L. Parrington, he could see the conflict of the people and the money power in terms of the conflict of Ormadz and Ahriman. His hero was the exploited mass; his villains were "reaction" and "privilege."

His most celebrated work, The Rise of American Civilization, written in collaboration with Dr. Mary Beard, his wife, appeared to presage the New Deal. In the middle 1930s he scornfully attacked the Supreme Court veto of the earlier New Deal legislation as a belated and hypocritical conversion of "strict construction" by the perennial faction which had formerly tortured the plain sense of the Constitution in the interests of monopoly and profits. Thus it was little wonder that Professor Beard's authority was cited so often in the pages of the liberal weeklies and always in accents of veneration.

But before his death Professor Beard had undergone a complete metamorphosis in the eyes of the radicals. His halo had vanished and was replaced by a pair of horrendous horns, and he found himself being taken under the patronage of the isolationist press.

This was due to Dr. Beard's bitter opposition to American intervention in the war against the Axis powers, and his subsequent effort to prove that President Roosevelt had deliberately thwarted the possibility of a peaceful settlement in the Pacific, and had actually arranged the series of events which culminated in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. Who was the more inconsistent—Dr. Beard or the radicals—is problematical. However, it must be said that Dr. Beard seems always to have been pretty steadfastly in favor of a closed and self-sufficient economy for the Americas.

To say that Beard was more the historical polemist than the scientific historian is not necessarily to disparage him. It is indeed a question whether the whole idea of "scientific history" is not an illusion. The historian's vision is necessarily affected by the temper of the age in which he writes; thus it may be that what we call history is merely the reflection of our own philosophies or prejudices. In any event, the controversial historian has a function. That function is to prevent the creation of myths. Professor Beard was doubtless unjust in imputing sinister motives to Mr. Roosevelt and his associates; but at the same time he helped to puncture the officially fabricated myth, and no future historian, jealous of his reputation, will dare to swallow it.

Troops In Korea

Korea is one of those areas where pure military strategy dictates a withdrawal of American troops and yet where political considerations make such a withdrawal at this time hazardous. For that reason there is encouragement in the State Department's reassurance that any decision to withdraw our soldiers must await the forthcoming meeting of the U. N. General Assembly. Previously there had been a report that the National Security Council had already determined to pull American troops out of that beleaguered country. The General Assembly is the body under whose auspices were conducted the recent elections in South Korea which were the precursor of the new Korean Republic. It is the proper body to evaluate the success of the Rhee regime there and to appraise the threats emanating from the so-called people's republic organized separately by the Russians in North Korea. We can well afford to see what the General Assembly does before taking action.

Garrisoning South Korea is an unlovely job, disliked by the Americans who participate and the independence-jealous Koreans alike. Yet there can be no question that withdrawal of the garrison at this time would make a fiction out of independence. The ability of the fledgling nation to withstand an onslaught of the Communist-trained gendarmerie from North Korea is extremely doubtful. This would be true now even if the Russians were to withdraw their forces from the northern zone, for they have organized there all the trappings of the police state. That is why American troops have remained in the south this long, not as an important military force in themselves, but as a sort of symbol to guarantee Korean integrity. It will be no easy task for the United Nations to decide what to do. Certainly American forces must be withdrawn sometime, and it is well to look toward that end. But it would be an embarrassment, to say the least, to abandon South Korea to satellite status in the Soviet empire. Unless a substitute arrangement can be worked out with the U. N. to fill the power vacuum, there is real danger that withdrawal not only would condemn the Korean Republic to civil war, but also would damage American prestige in Asia and would chill the hearts of all peoples on the fringe of Soviet aggression. Korea seems an ideal argument for Secretary General Lie's plea for the establishment of a police force responsible to the U. N. For our own part, despite the compelling case that Korea is a military liability, there are more than merely military reasons to consider in planning American policy.

Exoneration

The report to the Secretary of State of the three-man committee appointed to investigate whether certain representatives of international organizations in this country constitute a security threat is a rewarding document. The committee was composed of B. M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Star; James H. Rowe, jr., former Assistant Attorney General and now a member of the Hoover Commission, and Marcellus Sheild, retired clerk of the House Appropriations Committee. None of this committee could be suspected of Communist contamination or lack of sensitivity to the dangers that might exist if wholesale spying were being conducted under the cloak of the United Nations.

What the committee has to say, therefore, carries considerable weight. Not only does the report make mincemeat of the charges that the U. N. is serving as a roost for Communist agents in this country, it has some well-chosen words about the way in which these charges were leveled:

> Subordinate officials of a nonpolicy-making division of the Department of State testified at a public hearing on a matter of high policy before a Senate subcommittee presided over and directed by staff employes with no Senator present. So far as we are aware, this practice is without precedent. The testimony produced serious repercussions on the foreign policy of the United States and that testimony was irresponsible in its lack of factual support.

Moreover, the committee concludes, there are adequate safeguards in existing laws to protect the United States against the admission of undesirable aliens or to deport them, irrespective of their affiliation with an international organization. The committee does note that administrative procedures in this respect are not "satisfactorily coordinated." It raises some doubt as to whether the conduct of several individuals accredited to international organizations has been consistent with national security after their arrival. But it also reports that no available evidence would have justified the refusal of a visa at the time it was issued.

Furthermore, the committee takes a dim view of the arbitrary classification by the State Department of some 263 Communists affiliated with international organizations as security threats. The listing of these cases it regards as "capricious and without significance," inasmuch as the iron curtain countries are entitled "to send representatives and their families . . . The risk in permitting these people to come to the United States is the calculated risk implicit in the location within the United States of the United Nations headquarters."

The rebukes clearly implied in the report ought not to be missed. The first is to the State Department, where subordinate officials apparently got out of hand and created a sensation with testimony based largely on suspicion. The second is to the Senate Judiciary Committee and its Immigration Subcommittee, under whose auspices the hearings were held without senatorial supervision, with the result that news stories had the effect of exaggerating unsubstantiated testimony. As a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Senator Revercomb in particular ought to read the report, for his remarks at the time showed that he has not the slightest comprehension of the responsibility that the United States assumed when the United Nations was brought to this country. How much better it would have been if the howlers had approached the problem with the calm detachment of the three-man investigating committee instead of launching forth half-cocked with an embarrassing affront to the United Nations that made the United States a laughing stock!

Freedom For Heretics

However incontestable the existence of God may seem to the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, to this newspaper, and to an overwhelming majority of other Americans, the plain fact is that there are some who doubt and even some who deny it. The particular concept of God and the manner in which He ought to be worshipped to which Father Walsh subscribes must also seem to him incontestable, since he is a man of the deepest religious conviction and sincerity. Nevertheless there are many who dissent from his views. Their right to dissent in detail or in general is guaranteed by the very first Article of the Bill of Rights which stipulates that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion."

In protesting, as he did Wednesday in testimony before the House Select Committee to Investigate the Federal Communications Commission, that the FCC had "by innuendo" declared that "the existence of God is a controversial subject," Father Walsh introduced an issue quite irrelevant to the FCC's ruling that broadcasters must not deny atheists "the right to answer attacks upon them or their belief solely because they are few in number." The subject is controversial because there is and always has been controversy about it. The FCC has merely recognized a reality that is inescapable and declared that broadcasting facilities licensed by the Government of the United States must observe the same rules of fair play respecting this controversy as respecting any other. But Father Walsh advances a strange argument against this conclusion:

> It would be the first step toward self-immolation for a government to throw the sanction of its power and the mantle of fictitious liberalism over practices, doctrines and techniques which begin with protestations of equality but which have ended in the rise of Godless dictatorships and the brutalizing of human personality.

It is doubtful that Father Walsh can find much justification in history for this observation. Godless dictatorships have risen historically out of attempts to impose conformity, out of the denial of dissent, out of an arrogation by governments of authority to proclaim the one true faith. Human personality is much more likely to be brutalized by restraints upon freedom of thought and expression than by tolerance of heterodoxy and even heresy.

To permit so powerful a channel of communication as radio to be wholly closed to atheists would be to indorse a restraint upon expression alien to the American society. The FCC has quite properly declined to do this and has said that a specific organization of atheists when directly attacked should be allowed to reply. That is all that the fuss is about. There is no need to fear from this either that the air will be flooded with their oratory or that the worship of God will be subverted by the force of their arguments. Freedom of expression is always the best antidote to error of opinion.

Schacht's Acquittal

The acquittal of Dr. Schacht by a German appeals court is an indication of the softening of de-Nazification in Germany. Eighteen months ago Dr. Schacht was sentenced to eight years in prison by a German de-Nazification Court at Stuttgart. His release will be resented by many bitter-enders who realize the part he played in financing the war machine of Nazi Germany. The fact remains that at Nuernburg the evidence was not conclusive enough to warrant conviction on the grounds that he was privy to aggression. He escaped punishment along with Papen and Fritzsche.

Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht (to give him his full name) is now 69. But, as occasional letters which this newspaper has received from him in prison testify, he is a remarkably vital man. Born in Brooklyn, he seemed on first acquaintance to be a cosmopolitan, but his Germanism was as strident as that of any Nazi. To the Nazi cause he lent a mind which was by all odds outstanding among those of Europe's central bankers in the period between wars. At the successive reparation conferences he reminded the observer of Talleyrand at Vienna—the representative of the defeated who succeeded by sheer brainpower and willpower (not to say brass) in dominating the proceedings. No wonder he was given the highest I. Q. among all the defendants at Nuernburg. Here he argued his own case of noncomplicity with Hitler with great skill and aplomb. His whole defense was based upon the assertion that he had never been one of the Nazi gang, that he stayed in the party after realizing its fell purpose because he felt that his duty lay in boring from within, and that then he had suffered the penalty of noncompliance by incarceration in a concentration camp. His success surprised nobody who had been in contact with his dialectics.

Dr. Schacht provided the Hitlerian state with its commercial as well as its financial sinews. He waged the trade war which preceded the shooting war. His system, or lack of it, was called Schachtism. After instituting state trading, he would capture a market by overwhelming it with a product at much less than cost of production, then raise the price when competitors had been squeezed out. Thus he recouped the preliminary loss. Another device was to buy a commodity in bulk that otherwise would have been unsalable, paying for it in a blocked currency, which eventually had to be spent upon a particular commodity in Germany that the Germans themselves wanted to dispose of. The customers created by what, with his wonted cynicism, Schacht called this "unspeakably barbaric" system became his economic slaves. As an example of Schachtian methods, Greece's holdings of frozen marks were once liquidated by consigning to Greece enough aspirin to produce a national headache!

The irony was that this kind of no-system became more or less common practice after the war among all the victors except the United States. Perhaps this was one reason he got off scot-free. A man of skyhigh ambition, he always struck us as a man who got on the Hitler bandwagon because he felt that when Hitler had overreached himself, the leadership of the state would be all ready for Schacht himself to take over. But that he helped to create the monster admits of no argument.

VESTIGES

If, when you excavate this age,
You find beneath the distant dust
The crumbled trappings of our time
In shards and rubble and in rust,
Expose no specious relics first,
The spate of armaments dispersed.

And if, clandestine in the clay,
In fissures where the blood ran dry,
You turn a lintel to the light
And conjure up our common sky,
Remember how our cities burned
In holocausts our hatred earned.

We had our heyday once, as Tyre;
As once in Greece, our genius ranged;
But dust is never more than dust
Although ingredients are changed.
Restore with reverence and love
The splintered fossil of the dove.

"Progressive" Schools

Attendance at the Montgomery County workshop meetings for planning the curriculum of the public schools further confirms my opinion that this system of education which we have in Montgomery County, and in all too many of the country's public schools, is planned for the sole purpose of softening the mentality of the present generation of children to the end that the ruinous logic of treacherous doctrines can more easily corrupt the substance of free trade in ideas. When the substance is changed how simple it will be to change the form of free trade in ideas.

Why else is emphasis placed on group conversion to a "way of life" rather than on training of the individual mind and character? I wonder how many parents know that in sending their children to "progressive" schools they are not sending their children to school for the purpose of educating them in the basic skills and essentials of knowledge. In what other modern educational system are certain multiplication tables considered too hard for average children to learn; is grammar considered unnecessary; is history taught so vaguely that children don't even know they are being taught history and know nothing of their heritage?

Why all the mystery about this "way of life" so that it cannot be defined; so that individual children may not have individual textbooks that can be brought home? What is so mysterious about our children's education that they do not have homework?

What other modern educational system than the "progressive" hires a host of psychologists to experiment on average American children and discover them fraught with "learning blocs" so that they cannot learn what average American children have always been able to learn and are still learning in spite of the "progressives?"

How does it happen the man who has been the chief exponent of the "progressive" system is also the author of a series of textbooks called Building America, which is sponsored by the National Education Association, and which have been barred from California public schools because the courts found the series to be subversive in that "it undermines principles essential to our form of Government?"

No Theater

Mr. Mathes, in his August 31 letter on a Government theater, successfully confuses two arguments, which have to be considered separately.

Mr. Mathes righteously castigates The Washington Post for presuming to speak out in favor of a mixed theater audience, and also chastises those people who speak of the Government as "their Government," but then he reverses his course of criticism to permit himself to speak for "most white people."

I speak only for myself, and in my individual capacity I wonder whether Mr. Mathes recognizes the anomaly of our preaching democratic principles on the basic equality of all men under our system of government, and then discriminating against a particular minority in our own Nation's Capital, where so many diplomatic representatives are on hand to see our double standard of "equality" in action.

Theater facilities and other such cultural benefits can be grandiosely dispensed with as a sacrifice to the gods of intellectual pride, and prejudicial arbitrariness. Obviously the sole satisfaction the closing of the only stage theater in Washington can bring is to those who desire to perpetuate the theory of "cultural lag" between one race and another.

The problem of Government leasing of facilities to a private concern for theater purposes is quite another question, and deserving of a more thorough analysis than Mr. Mathes has given it. No one expects the Government to overextend itself in behalf of Washington theatergoers, but to say that there is no obligation incumbent upon the District government, whose members are representatives of our Federal Government, is quite another thing.

This is also one of the first times to my knowledge that it has become unsavory to speak of our Government in the possessive. Harrington and Locke, upon whose theories and precepts our Government is derived, spoke quite extensively on government by consent, the people reposing trust in their representatives to act for them in their behalf. Has this too undergone a new interpretation, just as equality?

Fire Quelled

I wish to call your attention to a first page story in your issue of August 31. The headline reads: "Fire Breaks Out on Capitol Roof, Is Quickly Quelled."

Now a riot may be quelled. A fire may be quenched.

I inquire, was the fire quelled"? CORA MARCH.

Editor's Note: Webster's New International Dictionary lists "quell" as meaning "to kill, also to dash or beat out or down" as well as "to overpower or subdue."

Wallace Egged

Never for a moment had it occurred to me to vote for Wallace. But when I read of the behavior of some of our Americans, I felt not only like crying for shame, but decided to vote for him as a protest against this disgraceful conduct, and earnestly prayed that all decent Americans would do likewise. The rest of the world must look with amazement at this spectacle of an American, recently Vice President of the United States, being pelted with rotten eggs and tomatoes by persons who call themselves Americans.

One does not have to be a Wallacite to protest the dragging down of our country to the worst Fascist and Nazi tactics to squelch an opponent. Americanism means fair play for an opponent, a decent hearing to what he has to say. No one will be won away from Wallace by these tactics. Many will feel compelled to vote for him as a protest. The rotten eggs and tomatoes should prove a boomerang. E. G.

Merchant Seamen

I am at a loss to understand by what means Mr. Truman justestifies his elimination of merchant seamen from the current draft exemptions.

That these men performed their duty in a most creditable manner during World War II, though under conditions of physical danger as hazardous as any branch of the service, is a well-known fact. The vitalness of their services was reflected in the proverbial "moon" which was promised if they would only enlist. After more than two years this bill has never advanced beyond a House committee in Congress.

Case Against A Fare Increase

The more I learn about the case of the Capital Transit Co. for an increase in rates the more annoyed I become. It seems to me that there are two lines of approach to the problem. As far as I can find out, the PUC will not use either.

First, a detailed analysis of the present system should be made to discover where the company is losing money, if any. The company does not, has not and will not keep records so that each line can be checked as a line. Personally, I think that 90 per cent of the patrons pay for their ride and a reasonable and fair profit. Certainly all the main lines pay for themselves. Where then are the losses? I don't know, and neither does anyone else, because the records have not been so kept. It becomes impossible to adjust the system to make it run at a profit without such records, yet the company won't keep them.

Second, the actual accounting of the company is difficult, if not impossible, to dispute, as the antics of Mr. McElfresh readily show. As long as the company's case is based only on accounting, it can't lose, and the company knows that. But I seriously question whether it can win on an engineering basis. Listed below are various suggestions of what might be done. I think some of them can result in substantial economies.

1. What has happened to the Rosslyn-Brookland proposed routing? It was abandoned because of the delay in the Benning abandonment, but would not it result in substantial economies anyway?

2. How about a more liberal use of the turnarounds and cutback? I believe a passenger count would reveal that far too many buses and streetcars go to the end of the line.

3. How about some rerouting? G st. is but lightly used now. (A new schedule on Mount Rainier-Potomac Park went into effect this week. Did this reduction in runs figure in the company's expense estimate?) How about putting all Potomac Park cars on 7th or 5th sts. and running only half of them to Potomac Park and half to the loop at 7th st. and Pensylvania ave.

The outstanding facts to be remembered is that the company isn't actually losing money on its District of Columbia operations. I cannot say that with finality, because neither the company nor Mr. McElfresh would break down the costs and revenues into Maryland and District of Columbia operations, but for the same reason I cannot be successfully proved wrong.

But I believe I am right. Since the company is making money, there need be no hurry to raise rates, but other solutions looking toward economy may be attempted. I have tried to suggest a few.

It seems unfortunate that this case had to be tried at this time. The Highway Department is conducting an extensive survey which may well lead to the abandonment or change in some routes. The company wants a fare raise first and then a relocation of routes. It seems to me that it should be the other way around.

It is incumbent upon the PUC to act in the public interest. This means not only that the company must be preserved in good financial condition, but that the public should have a just and reasonable fare. For several years our late great President refused to appoint a public counsel, such as Mr. O'Dea is now and Mr. Lauderdale was several years ago. His position was that the PUC should be acting in the public interest, so that no special counsel was needed. That spirit does not seem to prevail in the present PUC.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Spy Jitters

DENVER.—Driving through the West, you get a powerful impression of people at work and at play. In spite of the ordeal of the war, in spite of inflation and the postwar overcrowding, you have the sense of a Nation moving forward with vigor and confidence.

Then you read the headlines in the newspapers. They convey the idea that Soviet Russia has this country by the throat; that the Nation is in deadly peril from a conspiracy into which many Americans have entered.

That idea is, in my opinion, false. To spread such an idea is to do a disservice to the country. It is to spread fear and doubt far beyond any justification.

The moving spirits of the House Un-American Activities Committee and the agitators allied with them seem never to have thought how their behavior reflects on the country itself. They behave as though Americans might actually be persuaded in large numbers that Russian communism was superior to the American system.

This is, of course, absurd. Our way of life in this country offers infinitely greater rewards, both on the material and the spiritual and intellectual side, than Russian communism. And the great mass of the American people have the common sense to know it.

I believe if Chairman J. Parnell Thomas and the other men who seem so frightened would get out into the country, away from the overheated atmosphere of Washington, they would recognize that fact. They would see America in the full tide of road building, of home building, of work, of play.

CERTAINLY what has been unfolded so far does not justify this fright. Eccentrics, visionaries, idealists with a childish love of conspiracy have gone mysterious and conspiratorial. Apparently this has satisfied some impulse that the ordinary person does not feel.

But if they have given information of any value to the Soviet Union or if they have succeeded in undermining the faith of any substantial number of Americans, then the papers that I have seen have not printed it. It has been on the level of supposition, accusation, rumor and hearsay.

Part of the harm it does, in my opinion, is to undermine belief in the basic American freedoms. When a man can be accused of disloyal action on the statement of a single individual, with apparently no substantiating proof, and the charge proclaimed sensationally to the world, then we are jeopardizing the fundamental guarantees on which the American system rests.

I DO NOT MEAN by this to doubt that Soviet Russia has an espionage network in this country. But the way to uncover that network is not by sensational hearings that produce sensational headlines and charges and countercharges.

There is an agency authorized by law to protect the country from treason and sabotage. That agency is the Federal Bureau of Investigation under J. Edgar Hoover. Until these lurid so-called hearings began, the FBI had a very high standing in the country. One of the incidental effects of the "investigation" is to make people wonder whether the FBI has been on the job.

A Russian espionage network in Canada was uncovered that had drawn some Canadian citizens into its toils just as some American citizens may have been perverted by communism or the agents of communism. Canada demonstrated another way to combat the threat to national security represented by the Communist spy ring in Ottawa.

A Royal Commission was appointed. The responsible and respected citizens on that commission held a long, painstaking inquiry in secret. The commission published a long, careful report and where evidence justified it, individuals were prosecuted. The names of those not guilty were not dragged into the record.

If the FBI needs greater powers, then it should be given greater powers and a larger appropriation. Perhaps something like a Royal Commission is necessary in this country in order to carry out an inquiry thoroughly and with documentation rather than with movie cameras and headlines.

But I believe a healthy thing would be to get Chairman Thomas and his fellows out into the country. Seeing so many busy, active people, they could not long cling to the illusion that seems to motivate their fears; that is, that Americans are about to fall for communism.

Montgomery Finances

I read, with some amusement, the item headed "Montgomery Avoids Pre-Tax Borrowing First Time Since '32" on page 1B of your issue of September 1.

The fact is that the principal reason for this favorable condition of Montgomery County's finances is due to the fine work of the present Board of County Commissioners, headed by Brooke Johns, and including "Ace" Esworthy, Oliver Youngblood and Wesley Sauter. The board cut out waste after taking office, got rid of a lot of deadwood, and stepped up efficiency. O. E. L.

Matter Of Fact

From The Feed Box

THE CANDIDATES are, so to speak, being put through their final course of rest, conditioning diet and early morning gallops, in preparation for the grand presidential sweepstakes. The race will begin shortly. It is time for a report on the form the contestants have been showing.

Perhaps the most interesting news of the favorite, Governor Dewey, is the group of men he has recruited to help him during the campaign. At Albany, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., and Representative Everett Dirksen are assisting Elliott V. Bell and the other members of Dewey's singularly able personal staff with domestic speech-drafting and over-all campaign strategy. And in New York, John Foster Dulles, his brother, Allen; Representative Christian R. Herter and McGeorge Bundy constitute a special committee on foreign policy.

What stands out about these men is that they all belong to the more progressive, international-minded faction of the Republican Party. Dirksen, for example, is one of the few Illinois politicians who are not serfs of Col. Robert R. McCormick. Lodge is the most conspicuous of the younger, more liberal Republicans in the Senate, and has repeatedly challenged the leadership of Senator Robert A. Taft. And Bundy trained for drafting Dewey speeches by helping Henry L. Stimson to prepare his great autobiography and collaborating on an as-yet unpublished book with Walter Lippmann. (It has been irreverently remarked that Bundy's only possible next step, after these experiences, will be to modernize the Ten Commandments.)

DEWEY'S choice of these particular men to help him both bodes ill for the Republican Old Guard if he is elected, and suggests the kind of campaign he wants to make. The present plan is for a campaign that will be short but intensive, starting late, including no more than 10 or 12 major speeches, and taking what politicians call a "high line." This means that as yet, at any rate, Dewey is resisting the temptation to engage in personal recrimination with President Truman or play Mr. District Attorney on the so-called Red issue.

This sort of appeal will be left, according to present plan, to other Republican speakers, as will the appeal that Dewey can give "efficient government." Dewey's own speeches will be aimed, rather, to present Dewey as a bold leader of genuinely national stature. Thus in discussing foreign policy Dewey will probably emphasize the gravity of the world situation, acknowledge the vast resulting American responsibility and assert his determination to discharge that responsibility without faltering, even if grave temporary sacrifices may be necessary in this country. Perhaps nothing so unconventional as a mention of sacrifices in campaign time will be attempted after all. Yet it is cheering that this sort of appeal to adults should even be considered.

HOW DEWEY strategy may be affected by President Truman's campaigning efforts, it is as yet impossible to predict. The AFL and CIO have achieved a strange unity, for instance, to greet Truman on Labor Day in Detroit. His circle of trainers and exercisers expect that the President will have an audience of 250,000 to hear him denounce the Taft-Hartley Act. If Truman begins to score successes, the Dewey campaign plans are likely to become considerably less Olympian.

Two points are already clear. First, Truman's campaign will be mainly directed toward mobilizing special groups of supporters—labor, increasingly aroused by recent Taft-Hartley Act developments; the farmers, pleased with their high prices, and so on. Second, if sheer grinding effort can win an election, Truman has a better chance than people think. He will be quartering the country, alternating major speeches and appearances at every whistle stop, from mid-September onward.

There is only one factor that could cause a change in these plans. The finances of the Democratic National Committee are in such catastrophic state that there is not enough money in hand to make the necessary advance radio, travel, publicity and other contracts. Since borrowing money is supposedly illegal, there is a remote chance that the President may not be able to put his case before the people. In contrast, the fat cats are lavishing their funds upon the Republicans.

This financial disparity between the parties is an unhealthy business, which should receive careful postelection study. Meanwhile, it can only be said that if the campaign goes as predicted, an election year in a time of crisis is not likely to be so damaging as many people have predicted.

World Church Report on Disorder in Society

Amsterdam, Sept. 2 (AP).—The text of the draft report of the World Council of Churches section on "The Church and the Disorder of Society":

1. The world today is experiencing a social crisis of unparalleled proportions. The deepest root of that disorder is the refusal of men to see and admit that their responsibility to God stands over and above their loyalty to any earthly community and their obedience to any worldly power. Our modern society, which is for the most part secular in its outlook, underestimates both the depth of evil in human nature and the full height of freedom and dignity of the children of God.

2. The Christian church approaches the disorder of our society with faith in the lordship of Jesus Christ. In him God had established His kingdom and its gates stand open for all who will enter. Their lives belong to God with a certainty that no disorder of society can destroy, and on them is laid the duty to seek God's kingdom and His righteousness.

3. In the light of that kingdom, with its judgment and mercy Christians are conscious of the sins which corrupt human communities and institutions in every age, but they are also assured of the final victory over all sin and death through Christ. It is He who has bidden us pray for the coming of His kingdom on earth, and our obedience to that command requires that we seek in every age to overcome the specific disorders which aggravate the perennial evil in human societies, and that we search out the means of securing their elimination or control.

4. Men are often disillusioned by finding that changes of particular systems do not bring unqualified good, but fresh evils. New temptations to greed and power arise even in systems more just than those they have replaced because sin is ever present in the human heart. Many, therefore, lapse in apathy, irresponsibility and despair. The Christian faith leaves no room for such despair, being based on the fact that the Kingdom of God is firmly established in Christ and will come by God's act despite all human failure.

5. Two chief factors contribute to the crisis of our age. One of these is the vast concentrations of power—which are under capitalism mainly economic and under Communism both economic and political. For such conditions, social evil is manifest on the largest scale not only in the greed, pride and cruelty of persons and groups, it lies also in the momentum or inertia of huge organizations of men, which diminish their ability to act as moral and accountable beings. To find ways of realizing personal responsibility for collective action in the large aggregations of power in modern society is a task which has not yet been undertaken seriously.

6. The second factor is that society, as a whole, dominated as it is by technics, is likewise more controlled by a momentum of its own than in previous periods. This leads to concentrations of power. While it enables men the better to master nature, it has the possibilities of destruction, both through war and through the undermining of the natural foundations of society in family, neighborhood and craft. It has collected men into great industrial cities and has deprived many societies of those forms of association in which men can grow most fully as persons. It has accentuated the tendency in men to waste Gods gift to them in the soil and in other natural resources.

7. On the other hand, technical developments have relieved men and women of much drugery and poverty, and are still capable of doing more. There is a limit to what they can do in this direction. Large parts of the world, however, are far from that limit. Justice demands that the inhabitants of Asia and Africa, for instance, should have the benefits of more machine production. They may learn to avoid the mechanization of life and the other dangers of an unbalanced economy which impair the social health of the older industrials peoples. Technical progress also provides channels of communication and interdependence which can be aids to fellowships, though closer contact may also produce friction.

8. There is no inescapable necessity for society to succumb to undirected developments of technology, and the Christian church has an urgent responsibility today to help men to achieve fuller personal life within the technical society.

9. In doing so the churches should not forget to what extent they themselves have contributed to the very evils which they are tempted to blame wholly on the secularization of society. While they have raised up many Christians who have taken the lead in movements of reform, and while many of them have come to see in a fresh way the relevance of their faith to the problems of society, and the imperative obligations thus laid upon them, they share responsibility for the contemporary disorder. Our churches have often given religious sanction to the special privileges of dominant classes, races and political groups, and so they have been obstacles to changes necessary in the interests of social justice and political freedom. They have often concentrated on a purely spiritual or other-wordly or individualistic interpretation of their message and their responsibility. They have often failed to understand the forces which have shaped society around them, and so they have been unprepared to deal creatively with new problems as they have arisen in technical civilization, they have often neglected the effects of industrialization on agricultural communities.

10. In the industrial revolution, economic activity was freed from previous social controls and outgrew its modest place in human life. It created the vast network of financial, commercial and industrial relations which we know as the capitalist order. In all parts of the world new controls have in various degrees been put upon the free play of economic forces, but there are economic necessities which no political system can afford to defy. In our days, for instance, the need for stability in the value of money, for creation of capital and for incentives in production, is inescapable and worldwide. Justice, however, demands that economic activities be subordinated to social ends. It is intolerable, that vast millions of people be exposed to insecurity, hunger and frustration by periodic inflation or depression.

11. That church cannot resolve the debate between those who feel that the primary solution is to socialize the means of production, and those who fear that such a course will merely lead to new and inordinate combinations of political aand economic power, culminating finally in an omnicompetent state. In the light of the Christian understanding of men we must, however, say to the advocates of socialization that the institution of property is not the root of the corruption of human nature, we must equally say to the defenders of existing property relations that ownership is not an unconditional right, it must, therefore, be preserved, curtailed or distributed in accordance with the requirements of justice.

12. On the one hand we must vindicate the supremacy of persons over purely technical considerations by subordinating all economic processes and cherished rights to the needs of the community as a whole. On the other hand, we must preserve the possibility of a satisfying life for "little men in big societies" we must prevent abuse of authority and keep open as wide a sphere as possible in which men can have direct and responsible relations with each other as persons.

13. Coherent and purposeful ordering of society has now become a major necessity. Here governments have responsibilities which they must not shirk. But centers of initiative in economic life must be so encouraged as to avoid placing too great a burden upon centralized judgment and decision. To achieve religious, cultural, economic, social and other ends it is of vital importance that society should have a rich variety of smaller forms of community, in local government, within industrial organizations, including trade unions, through the development of public corporations and through voluntary associations. By such means it is possible to prevent an undue centralization of power in modern technically organized communities, and thus escape the perils of tyranny while avoiding the dangers of anarchy.

14. Man is created and called to be a free being, responsible to God and his neighbor. Any tendencies in state and society depriving man of the possibility of acting responsibly are denial of God's intention for man and his work of salvation. A responsible society is one where freedom is the fredom of men who acknowledge responsibility to justice and public order, and where those who hold political authority or economic power are responsible for its exercise to God and the people whose welfare is affected by it.

15. Men must never be made a mere means for political or economic ends. Man is not made for the state but the state for man; man is not made for production, but production for man. For a society to be responsible under modern conditions it is required that the people have freedom to control, to criticize and to change their governments, that power be made responsible by law and tradition, and be distributed as widely as possible through the whole community. It is required that economic justice and provision of equality of opportunity be established for all the members of society.

16. We therefore condemn:

A. Any attempt to limit the freedom of the church to witness to its Lord and His design for mankind and any attempt to impair the freedom of men to obey God and to act according to conscience, for those freedoms are implied in man's responsibility before God.

B. Any denial to man of an opportunity to participate in the shaping of society, for this is a duty implied in man's responsibility toward his neighbor.

C. Any attempt to prevent men from learning and spreading the truth.

17. Christians should ask why communism in its modern totalitarian form makes so strong an appeal to great masses of people in many parts of the world. They should recognize the work of God in the revoit of multitudes against injustice that gives communism much of its strength. They should seek to recapture for the church the original Christian solidarity with the world's distressed people, not to curb their aspirations toward justice, but, on the contrary, to go beyond them and direct them toward the only road which does not lead to a blank wall, obedience to God's will and His justice. Christians should realize that for many, especially for many young men and women, communism seems to stand for a vision of human equality and universal brotherhood for which they were prepared by Christian influences. Christians who are beneficiaries of capitalism should try to see the world as it appears to many who know themselves excluded from its privileges and who see in communism a means of deliverance from poverty and insecurity. All should understand that the proclamation of racial equality by Communists and their support of the cause of Colonial peoples make a strong appeal to the populations of Asia and Africa and to racial minorities elsewhere. It is a great human tragedy that so much that is good in the motives and aspirations of many Communists and of those whose sympathies they win has been transformed into a force that engenders new forms of injustice and oppression, and that which is true in Communist teaching should be used to give convincing power to untrustworthy propaganda.

18. Christians should recognize with contrition that many churches are involved in the forms of economic injustice and racial discrimination which have created the conditions favorable to the growth of communism, and that the atheist and the antireligious preaching of communism are in part a reaction to the checkered record of a professedly Christian society. It is one of the most fateful facts in modern history that often the working classes, including tenant farmers, came to believe that the churches were against them or indifferent to their plight. They should realize that the church has often failed to offer to its youth the appeal that can evoke a disciplined, purposeful and sacrificial response, and that in this respect, communism has met a spiritual need that the church has not satisfied.

19. The points of conflict between Christianity and the atheistic Marxian communism of our day are as follows: (1) The Communist promise of what amounts to a complete redemption of man in history. (2) The belief that a particular class by virtue of its role as the bearer of a new order is free from the sins and ambiguities that Christians believe to be characteristic of all human existence. (3) The materialistic and deterministic teachings, however they may be qualified, that are incompatible with the Christian belief in man as a person, made in God's image and responsible to Him. (4) The actual methods of Communists in dealing with their opponents, in the demand of the party on its members for an exclusive and unqualified loyalty which belongs only to God, and the policies of Communist distatorship in controlling every aspect of life.

20. The church should seek to resist the extension of any system that not only includes oppressive elements but fails to provide any means by which the victims of oppression may criticize or act to correct it. It is a part of the mission of the church to raise its voice of protest wherever men are the victims of terror, wherever they are denied such fundamental human rights as the right to be secure against arbitrary arrest, and wherever governments use torture and cruel punishments to intimidate consciences of men.

21. The church should make clear that there are conflicts between Christianity and capitalism. The developments of capitalism vary from country to country and often the exploitation of the workers that was characteristic of early capitalism has been corrected in considerable measure by the influence of trade unions, social legislation and responsible management. But (1) capitalism tends to subordinate what should be the primary task of any economy—the meeting of human needs—to the economic advantages of those who have most power over its institutions. (2) It tends to produce serious inequalities. (3) It has developed a practical form of materialism in Western nations in spite of their Christian background, for it has placed the greatest emphasis upon success in making money. (4) It has also kept the people of capitalist countries subject to a kind of fate which has taken the form of such social catastrophes as mass unemployment.

22. The Christian church should reject the ideologies of both communism and capitalism, and should seek to draw men away from the false assumption that these are the only alternatives. Each has made promises which it could not redeem. Communist ideology puts the emphasis upon economic justice, and promises that fredom will come automatically after the completion of the revolution. Capitalism puts the emphais upon freedom, and promises that justice will follow as a by-product of free entaerprise, that, too, is an ideology which has been proved false. It is the responsibility of Christians to seek new creative solutions which never allow either justice or freedom to destroy the other.

23. The greatest contribution that the church can make to the renewal of society is for it to be renewed in its own life in faith and obedience to its Lord. Such inner renewal includes a clearer grasp of the meaning of the Gospel for the whole life of men. This renewal must take place both in the larger units of the church and in the local congregations. The indirect influence of worshiping congregations upon the problems of society is very great when those congregations include people from many social groups. If the church can overcome the national and social barriers which now divide it, it can help society to overcome those barriers.

24. This is especially clear in the case of radical barriers. It is here that the church has failed most lamentably, where it has reflected, and, by its practices, then sanctified the racial prejudice that is rampant in the world. And yet it is here that today its guidance concerning what God wills for it is especially clear. It knows that it must call society away from the racial prejudice and from the practices of discrimination and segregation as denials of justice and human dignity, but it cannot say a convincing word to society unless it takes steps to eliminate these from the Christian community because they contradict all that it believes about God's love for all his children.

25. There are occasions on which the churches, through their councils or through such persons as they may commission to speak on their behalf, should declare directly what they see to be the will of God for the public decisions of the hour. Such guidance will often take the form of warnings against concrete forms of injustice or oppression or social idolatry. They should also point to the main objectives toward which a particular society should move.

26. But the social influence of the church must come primarily from its influence upon its members through constant teaching and preaching of Christian truth in ways that illuminate the historical conditions in which men live and the problems which they face. The church can be most effective in society as it inspires its members to ask in a new way what their Christian responsibility is whenever they vote or discharge the duties of public office, whenever they influence public opinion, whenever they make decesions as employers or as workers or in any other vocation to which they may be called. One of the most creative developments in the contemporary church is the practice of groups of Christians facing much the same problems in their occupations to pray and take counsel together in order to find out what they should do as Christians.

27. In discussing the social function of the church, Christians should always remember the great variety of situations in which the church lives. Nations in which professing Christians are in the majority, nations in which the church represents only a few per cent of the population, nations in which the church lives under a hostile and oppressive government offer very different problems for the church. It is one of the contributions of the ecumenical experience of recent years that churches under these contrasting conditions have come not only to appreciate one another's practices but to learn from one another's failure and achievements and sufferings.

28. There is a great discrepancy between all that has been said here and the possibility of action in many parts of the world. Obedience to God will be possible under all external circumstances. And no one need despair when conditions restrict greatly the area of responsible action. The responsible society of which we have spoken above represents, however, the goal for which the churches in all lands must work, to the glory of the one God and Father of all, and looking for the day of God and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

U. N. Bid Seen As Spain Lists City Elections

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—The Spanish cabinet scheduled Spain's first municipal elections in 12 years today in a move interpreted by political observers as a new Spanish bid for membership in the United Nations.

The cabinet, presided over by Generalisimo Francisco Franco, decided early this morning that the elections should be held in November. The action was recommended by the Interior Ministry.

The decision followed by only six days a meeting on the high seas between Franco and Don Juan, pretender to the Spanish throne. At that time, arrangements were made for Prince Juan Carlos, Don Juan's 10-year-old heir, to begin his formal education in Spain next month.

Political interpreters in Madrid said the cabinet action, an announcement that diplomatic relations between Spain and Saudi Arabia have been established and the Franco-Don Juan meeting all are part of Franco's strategy to strengthen his Nation's position before the United Nations General Assembly meeting this month in Paris.

Spain has been attempting to win membership in the U. N. over the vigorous opposition of the Soviet Union and her satellites.

The last Spanish municipal elections were held under the republic in 1936. It was recalled that the most important elections of this type were held in 1931, resulting in defeat of the Monarchists and the beginning of the republic.

The fall elections will be held without campaigning because political meetings against Franco are forbidden.

Only two elections of any kind have been held in Spain since the leftist victory at the polls in 1936 set off the civil war.

They took place last year. "Yes or no" ballots were submitted to the voters in a referendum on Franco's law of succession and on the Franco regime itself.

justice have helped the growth of communism. Christians were exhorted to "seek new creative solutions which never allow either justice or freedom to destroy the other."

Jewish authorities throughout the world were asked to cooperate in the work of relief among Arabs and other refugees from the Palestine war and to help speed the return of refugees to their homes.

While recognizing the gravity of the present international crisis, one report said "there is no irresistible tide that is carrying man to destruction."

The World Council has 450 delegates representing about 150 churches in more than 40 countries. The Roman Catholic Church and the Russian Church are among those not represented.

Chief draftsmen of the document were Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati, Ohio; John Coleman Bennett, professor of theology at Union Theological Seminary, New York; Dr. Barnabas Nagy, Hungary; Dr. Emil Brunner, University of Zurich, Switzerland, and Dr. Constantin Patijn, The Netherlands, chairman of the section.

There were no national blocs in the section which condemned capitalism and communism, a high church official said tonight.

The informant, who declined to be quoted by name, said the Americans in the section and on the committee which drafted the report were "functioning not as Americans but as members of a world-wide church movement."

There were 25 Americans in the section of 150 members.

Taft and Bishop Angus Dun of Washington, D. C., have been elected to the central committee of the council.

D. C. Man Buys Chain of Three Men's Stores

By S. Oliver Goodman

Max E. Glazer of Washington has purchased control of Langrock's Stores, Inc., which operates three men's wear stores in New Haven, Conn.; Providence, R. I., and Princeton, N. J., it was reported yesterday.

M. E. Glazer

Glazer, who becomes president of the Langrock corporation, is also president and treasurer of Saltz Bros., Inc., men's wear store at 1341 F st. nw. Glazer was out of town yesterday, but his brother Joseph confirmed the purchase. The latter added there will be no direct connection between the Washington firm and the Langrock chain.

In addition to Glazer, new Langrock officers will be Alan Frank of New Haven, secretary, and Hyman Becker of Princeton, treasurer.

Transfer of Langrock ownership resulted from the retirement of D. T. Langrock as president and A. E. Rubington as secretary-treasurer. Their controlling interest was bought by Glazer for an undisclosed amount. The Langrock chain was established more than 40 years ago.

THIS SPEED AGE: General foods scientists, after "lengthy research on the time required to prepare its Birdseye products in a pressure cooker," announced corn on the cob can be cooked in one minute. Using the old-fashioned method takes two minutes.

ODD LOTS: J. D. Marsh and Associates, Washington representative for Lincoln National Life Insurance Corp., set a new agency record for that company by writing $4,076,612 of life insurance in August . . . Guy W. Vaughan, president of the Curtiss-Wright Corp., declared rumors that the company was about to ask for tenders on its A stock were "positively without foundation" . . . Financial and commodity exchanges will suspend Labor Day, September 6 . . . Auto output this week is estimated by Automotive News at 73,004 cars and 22,971 trucks, compared with 74,487 cars and 25,176 trucks last week . . . In June 1939 the average price of black pepper in New York was 3.3 cents a pound; today it's 76 cents a pound.

DROPS DISCOUNT: Virginia Electric & Power Co., which operates extensively in nearby Virginia, has eliminated the 5 per cent discount on commercial and industrial bills, effective September 1. President J. G. Holtzclaw estimated the step would increase revenues about $1,300,000 annually. Vepco's construction program is progressing for the most part on schedule, Holtzclaw stated. During the first half of 1948, net property additions totaled $12,625,612 and this figure will be exceeded in the final half, he added.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

	Week ended August 25.	Week ended August 18.

SWEET NOTE: A combination development in peanuts and cocoa makes good news for candy eaters. In the last 10 months peanut millings totaled 1,749,000,000 pounds. That's a record. At the same time cocoa prices continued a recent downward movement, slipping more than 4 cents a pound to below 42 cents in the last three weeks. Candy makers are wondering how much closer it will get to the pre-war level of 5 cents a pound.

EARNINGS: Lerner Stores Corp. reported net income of $2,931,108 for the six months ended July 31, equal to $2.38 a common share, compared with $1,876,087 or $1.50 a share in same 1947 period. Other earnings reports:

6500 on D. C. Public Aid Rolls to Get More Money

Boost in Welfare Assistance Is Due To Increased U. S. Participation

Aged and blind persons and dependent children on Washington's public welfare rolls are going to get a little more money to live on under a new assistance scale started yesterday, Welfare Director John W. Tramburg said yesterday.

Tramburg, who said the raise in welfare money is "still far from sufficient," explained it comes from increased Federal participation in the welfare program.

It will allow the department to base its schedules for assistance money on 1946 food prices, rather than on the 1942 cost level now used. Tramburg said, however, that even the new scale is 10 per cent short of 1946 prices.

Approximately 6500 persons will be affected by the boost, which will be put into effect on a gradual basis as the department makes its periodic review of cases.

Under the scale, aid to blind persons will increase from about $40 a month to about $45. Aid to dependent children will go up from about $76 to $92, and old-age assistance cases will receive $45 rather than $40 a month.

Now on welfare rolls are 2385 old-age assistance cases, 4103 children receiving aid to dependent children in 1354 families, and 219 aid-to-blind cases.

Temporary Permit Given Movie House

"Mom and Dad" won't be evicted from their temporary abode at the Dumbarton Theater, 1349 Wisconsin ave. nw., after all.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King, after a hearing yesterday, decided that a temporary license good until November 1 be issued the theater where the picture "Mom and Dad" is currently dispensing sex education.

The theater, operated by Peoples Amusement Corp., had been operating without a license since last February when the superintendent of licenses for the District held that the showhouse had violated fire laws in having a wooden entrance and a wooden frame around the screen.

According to King, the owners failed to have the necessary changes made because the showhouse was in the process of being sold.

For the current attraction, the theater had been leased by the corporation to Charles B. Mead, who declared he did not know the showhouse had not been licensed.

King's decision was based mainly on results of an inspection tour of the theater made with Building Inspector Charles O'Connell.

King declared he was satisfied that "there is no immediate danger to the public."

"I think the parties involved, the management, the building department and the police were remiss in not bringing this (unlicensed operation) to my attention sooner," King said. "However," he continued, "in view of the fact that there is no immediate danger to the public and in order not to work a hardship against the present occupant, we ought to grant a temporary license until November 1."

Mead pointed out that tickets are sold only for the number of seats available and there is no standing, thus lessening any hazard.

New School to Open Sept. 7 in Falls Church

The new Oak Street School in Falls Church, which was not expected to be completed until later in the fall, will open with other public schools September 7, the Fairfax County school office announced yesterday.

Children in doubt as to whether they should attend the Oak Street or Madison School may report to either school on opening day for instruction, the office said.

1st D. C. Public Stenographer Bed-Ridden but Still at Work

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

BEDSIDE NOTARY—Miss Lydia Fox affixes her seal

Miss Lydia M. Fox, who believes she was the first public stenographer in Washington, now conducts an active notary public service at her home, 2215 Washington Circle, despite the fact that she has been confined to her bed for some nine years.

A cheerful and obliging woman of 87, she will notarize documents at any time of the day or night, and is especially busy after 5 p. m., when most notaries have closed their offices.

She gives the credit for the idea which led to her 24-hour service to a young man who came to install a phone at her bedside after the crippling fall which forced her to stay in bed.

"He said that if I had to stay here all the time, I should take advantage of that fact because I would always be available," she explained yesterday. "It turned out to be a good idea."

Miss Fox, who received a first notary public commission from President McKinley—she had applied before, but President Cleveland "didn't think much of the idea of women notaries"—began a full career as a $6 a week teacher in a small town public school in New York State, near her home town of Depauville, N. Y.

It was at the Capitol shortly after coming here in 1880 that she established herself as a "public stenographer" with a desk near the Senate restaurant. This work led to similar positions at the old Hotel Willard and the Riggs House, then conducted stenographic offices of her own at the Ames, Bond and Colorado Buildings.

Following her "ABC period," as she calls it, she went to the Philippines to see a friend and stayed almost two years as a housekeeper and boarding house manager. On her return to Washington during the First World War, she took boarders and by 1920 bought her present home.

"I had to sell all my old commissions, signed by various Presidents, to pay the mortgage interest on one due date," she laughed. "Another time, I did a special job of transcribing the diary of President Johnson's secretary, to pay another part of the interest. A Capitol reporter had tried it before, but the secretary's shorthand was so small that he gave up."

Miss Fox keeps a portable typewriter—far different from the machine she first learned on—her telephone, notary public seal stamp, legal paper and other tools of her trade right beside her. She's always ready to go to work at a moment's notice.

Lee Suggests Montgomery Build 14 Swimming Pools

The construction of 14 outdoor swimming pools in Montgomery County was suggested yesterday to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The proposal was made by E. Brooke Lee, vice chairman of the commission and its park commissioner, who also informed the commission the county needs at least six more community recreation and assembly buildings and two field houses.

Lee said the pools could be financed through a bond issue which could be retired on a 30-year term by using 2 cents of the 5-cent recreation tax now existing in the county. He said on the basis of present taxes, it would be possible to carry a bond issue of $800,000.

Lee suggested these as appropriate sites for the pools:

1. In Cabin John Run Park just north of MacArthur blvd.
2. In Little Falls Branch Park, just south of Massachusetts ave.
3. In the western section of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase recreation center.
4. At the north Bethesda recreation center.
5. In Rock Creek Park between Jones Bridge rd. and Kensington Junior High School.
6. In Rock Creek Park east of Rock Creek and adjacent to the village of Linden (for Negroes).
7. In a new park to be located alongside the town of Ken Gar and east of both Rock Creek Park and the B. & O. Railroad (for Negroes).
8. At the Capitol View-East Kensington recreation center.
9. At the Takoma Park recreation center between the junior high school and the elementary school.
10. On the east end of the Silver Spring recreation center.
11. In Sligo Valley Park between Okinawa dr. and the Sligo Park golf course.
12. On the east side of the Hillandale recreation center.
13. On the west side of the South Four Corners or Pinecrest recreation center.
14. In Long Branch Valley recreation center north of Piney Branch rd. and east of Flower ave.

Beef Valued at $90 Stolen From Boxcar

Theft of 150 pounds of commercial grade beef from a boxcar on a siding in the rear of the Safeway warehouse, 1431 Okie st. ne., was reported to police yesterday by Warehouse Superintendent Stephen W. Wright.

The beef, a hind quarter of commercial grade meat, valued at $90, was stolen after thieves broke into the boxcar between 2 p. m. Wednesday and 8 a. m. yesterday, Wright told police.

Judge Denies $88,000 Suit By Bus Line

Company Loses Claim Against Arnold Estate In Fairfax Court

Fairfax County Circuit Court has tossed out a suit brought by Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. to obtain $88,000 it claimed its late founder took without authority.

Judge J. Jordan Temple of Prince George County, Va., sitting for Judge Paul E. Brown, held the money had been duly voted Leon Arnold by the company's board of directors.

The suit had been brought by the company, the Arnold Lines, against Arnold's estate.

The suit claimed Arnold, who was killed in 1946 in a traffic accident, had taken the money between 1941 and 1946 while he was a majority stockholder. Attorneys for the estate, however, declared the money consisted of loans repaid to the founder by the company, interest on the loans and accumulated salary due him.

Judge Brown disqualified himself because he said he knew members of the Arnold family. Judge Taylor also denied a cross-claim by trustees for the Arnold estate that the bus line owed the estate $32,000.

Woman, Girl, Hurt as Auto Hits Truck

A woman and a 16-year-old girl were injured, one of them seriously, yesterday afternoon when their automobile crashed into the rear of a tractor-trailer truck on Baltimore blvd. at Old Berwyn rd., Berwyn, Md.

Admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital at Riverdale were Mrs. Eileen Blount, 5316 Gallatin st., Rogers Heights, who was reported in serious condition with a possible fractured skull, and Miss Jackie Ackman, 16, of Greenbelt, who suffered lacerations of the forehead.

Truck Driver Uninjured

According to Maryland State police the car, driven by Mrs. Blount, struck the rear of the northbound trailer after it halted behind another car. The other car had stopped at a traffic light. The driver of the truck, George Barth, 25, of Baltimore, was uninjured, police said.

Rush hour traffic along the boulevard was tied up for about half an hour as a result of the accident.

Miss Leslie Butler, 21, of 1623 Montague st. nw., suffered a fracture of the right ankle when the car in which she was a passenger, struck two trees at 16th st. and Fort Stevens dr. nw., District police reported. They said the operator of the car was Mrs. Lillian D. Schendell, 1443 Sheridan st. nw. Miss Butler was admitted to Emergency Hospital, where officials reported she was in "good condition."

Two-Year-Old Hurt

Two-year-old Charles Robert Norton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Norton of 1316 L st. se., yesterday morning suffered multiple bruises when he collided with a Capital Transit sign truck, as he was crossing the street in the 1300 block of K st. se. on his tricycle. The child was treated at Providence Hospital and released. Police listed John E. Carroll, 43, of 1st and Oak sts., Idylwood, Falls Church, Va., as the truck driver. Accident Investigation Unit policemen made no charges.

Montgomery Continues '3R' Drive

Mass Meeting Called Thursday to Protest Present Curriculum Of Modern Studies

Continuing its campaign against the county public school curriculum, the Parents League for Curriculum Improvement in Montgomery County has called a mass meeting for 8:30 p. m. Thursday at the Kensington National Guard Armory.

About 500 persons are expected at the meeting in the armory, Mirchell st. and Connecticut ave., Kensington, according to the league, which has a membership of about 100 persons.

John H. Hiser, Bethesda theater owner and league president, said "parents are most upset over developments at the Montgomery County Curriculum Workshop in Rockville, and have demanded a general meeting."

The group has charged that there is too much concentration on modern concepts of education and too little on the three Rs.

A "workshop" to study possible curriculm revisions, in which 48 teachers voluntarily participated, recently concluded with recommendations for more standardization of teaching practices in the county, but made no major revisions in the curriculum.

Three hundred persons attended the final session of the workshop and gave an 11 to 1 vote of confidence in present school board policies.

A league spokesman said yesterday the vote was "staged," and parents were furious over reports that "dishwashing" and laundering of "underwear and socks" were included in the fourth and fifth grade curriculum "for the benefit of children in the upper county schools."

The league's headquarters, 7424 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, will be open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. up to the mass meeting to promote circulation of the league's petition of protest, Hiser said.

Coroner Lists Death of Mix As Natural

A certificate of death by natural causes was issued yesterday afternoon in the death of Paul C. Mix, 64-year-old special police officer at the United States Soldiers' Home.

Mix collapsed and died Wednesday 10 minutes after he was struck in the face by resident who was in a seizure.

Acting Coroner Christopher J. Murphy, in issuing the certificate said an autopsy revealed no indications that the blow had been the cause of Mix's death.

The special police officer was struck shortly afternoon Wednesday by Edwin H. Anderson, 71, who became ill while eating in the home mess hall.

Anderson is under a doctor's care at the home hospital. Police did not take him into custody. He has been in poor health for the past 10 years.

Lottery Charges Are Dismissed

Lottery charges against Edward Stafford, 63, 3624 11th st. nw., and Izella Hockett, 28, 611 Keefer pl. nw., were dismissed yesterday by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence for lack of evidence.

The defendants had been arrested by members of the vice squad during a series of raids August 27. The case of James S. Tasker, 48, 1740 Euclid st. nw., who was arrested at the same time, was continued by the commissioner to September 16.

Hoodlum of Heyday in 1930s Shot Dead Groping for Dope

Henry Raymond (Big Boy) Milton, an over-age gangster and drug addict, reached the ultimate destination of crime yesterday—a berth in the morgue.

Milton was shot to death late Wednesday night by Washington detectives as he groped through a darkened drugstore in search of narcotics.

His days of glory were in the early '30s, as a member of the notorious Tri-State Gang.

But the 46-year-old Milton was only a lower-case hoodlum when he died. In his pocket he had only $1. He didn't even rate a gun.

Milton was trapped and shot at about 11:40 p. m. after he had broken into the Hall & Sothoron Drugstore, 1801 K st. nw.

Two Lying in Wait

Lying in wait for him when he entered were Detective Sergt. Murray Kutner and Plainclothesman Joseph A. Gabrys.

The web began to draw close around Milton several weeks ago as the police narcotics squad pursued a routine investigation of drugstore robberies. There have been between 30 and 40 such robberies here in the past two years.

Lieut. H. H. Carper, head of the narcotics squad, said Milton was known to have "cased" a drugstore, at 819 19th st. nw., on August 24. That night the store was entered and robbed of narcotics, but police were unable to prove Milton did the job.

As part of the over-all routine investigation, police have been visiting local drugstores armed with pictures of likely suspects, most of them drug addicts. Ten days ago, a photograph of Milton was among those shown the proprietor of the Hall & Sothoron store.

Technique Pays Off

The technique paid off. Wednesday at 4 p. m., Milton entered the store to "case" it. Dr. Dwight Hall, one of the owners of the store, recognized him immediately.

Milton would be hard to miss. He was a large man—6 feet, 3½ inches, and 227 pounds.

Dr. Hall went to the telephone immediately and called police. Even as he called, Milton lingered about 10 minutes over a cup of coffee at the soda fountain, studying the store interior thoroughly.

Dr. Hall's call went to Lieutenant Carper, who then conferred with Capt. Robert V. Murray, acting chief of detectives. It was decided to hide two detectives in the store Wednesday night.

Take Up Silent Vigil

When the store closed at 7 p. m., Kutner and Gabrys took up a silent vigil inside the darkened drug department of the store.

"A little after 11 p. m.," Lieutenant Carper said, "Milton came to a window in the rear of the store. He pulled off the screen, waited quietly for about 15 minutes, then jimmied open the window. After another 15-minute wait, he entered the store."

The one-time gangster stepped through the window onto a table in a booth. He could not be seen by Kutner and Gabys, who were crouched in the drug department behind a door that was almost closed. But they heard him. They heard his footsteps as he crossed the 20 feet from the window to the door to the drug department.

As Milton thrust open the door, one of the detectives warned him: "Stop! Put up your hands!"

Milton, his huge frame bent over, came on. Kutner fired first and Gabrys' service revolver exploded a split second later.

Dr. James G. Brown of the Emergency Hospital staff pronounced Milton dead at the scene at 11:52 p. m. and the body was removed to the morgue.

A coroner's inquest in the death will be held today at 11:30 a. m. at the morgue. Although the two detectives were technically held for action of the coroner pending the inquest, their appearance at the inquest was entrusted to Captain Murray.

"My men opened fire when they felt they had to," said Lieutenant Carper. "We would rather have a dead crook than a dead policeman."

Carper said he had known Milton as a dangerous morphine addict for five or six years, that he was "a dangerous man and a vicious character."

He pointed out that Milton had escaped recently after breaking into a drugstore in Prince Georges County by surprising policemen with a .45-caliber automatic.

When police examined Milton's body they found him to be wearing white cotton gloves, the type commonly used by safe crackers.

In his pocket with the $1 bill were a set of keys and the screwdriver he used to jimmy open the window.

According to police, Milton discarded his real name of Arthur Rhinehold Lutzweit at the age of 14. During his life of crime he had used the aliases of John Holmes and Charles Edwin Hill.

Since 1928, Milton had been arrested 36 times for everything from disorderly conduct and vagrancy to grand larceny, assault, housebreaking and safe cracking. Police said he had served 13 sentences and estimated he had spent about 13 years of his life behind bars.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett told reporters: "The boys did a fine job."

The Tri-State Gang to which Milton once owed allegiance terrorized Washington and nearby States in the early 30s. Its power was shattered completely in 1934 and 1935 with the capture and execution of the gang's leaders.

Sloan Again Questioned Over Wife's Strangling

Husband Admits Scuffle Shortly Before Slaying, But Denies Guilt

Further questioning of Ansoh M. Sloan, charged with murdering his wife in their Hampshire Knolls home Tuesday night, produced no "major" changes in his original account of the events leading to the woman's death, Prince Georges County police said last night.

Detective Earl Huber, who questioned the 39-year-old telephone company employe Wednesday night and yesterday morning, said Sloan reiterated his denial that he had strangled his wife, and insisted he found her unconscious in their home about an hour and a half before she died.

Questioned further about fingerprints found on Mrs. Sloan's throat, Sloan repeated his earlier statement that on the afternoon of his wife's death the pair had scuffled briefly when he tried to force her from the bedroom to prepare dinner, Detective Huber said.

Huber quoted Sloan as saying he might have grabbed his wife by the throat during the scuffle, adding "I guess I treated her pretty roughly, but I didn't strangle her."

Sloan's attorney, J. Richard Earle, of Washington, conferred with the defendant for the first time yesterday, but had no comment to make on the discussion.

Dr. J. T. Maloney, county medical examiner, said last night he planned to confer with police before issuing a certificate of death. Meanwhile, funeral arrangements for the dead woman awaited word from her relatives in Pennsylvania, according to Gasch funeral home officials.

Legal Gaming, Dispensary Views Sought

The Prince Georges Civic Federation last night moved to sound out affiliates on the question of legalizing gambling in the county and setting up a county-controlled liquor dispensary system.

The action was taken at a meeting of the organization in the County Service Building at Hyattsville. Franklin Brehme of the Chillum association, told the group his association voted in favor of the gambling and liquor moves last June.

Fred Ridgeway of the Vansville association reported his organization had voted against legalizing gambling but favored the liquor dispensary idea. The remaining delegates were instructed to determine the sentiments of their groups and report back.

In other actions, the federation approved appointment of Charles Luebner, Daniel M. Green, Walter F. Mulligan and George Ickes to the flood control committee which will seek congressional aid in alleviating flood conditions at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg.

The federation voted to invite representatives of the Prince Georges Real Estate Board and the county grange to meet with the federation's tax committee in a survey of county taxes.

Progress was reported by a special committee engaged in studying the need for additional police protection in the county.

Baby Sitter Fined $25 for Spanking

A baby sitter, convicted of spanking a 1-year-old baby girl too hard, was fined $25 on assault charges yesterday in Municipal Court.

The baby sitter, Mrs. Gussie Mae Mills, 46, who operates a day care home at 120 F st. se., admitted spanking the child, Rebecca Davis, with her hand but denied she had raised red welts as charged by the girl's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Davis, 27, of 124 F st. se.

Mrs. Davis testified that Mrs. Mills had told her she struck the baby because "it cried."

After hearing six character witnesses in behalf of Mrs. Mills, Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott declared:

"There is no question about the good reputation of the defendant and that she is humane. However, there is not the slightest doubt in my mind that she lost her temper in this case and I have to find her guilt of assault."

He then gave Mrs. Mills the choice of a $25 fine or 30 days. She chose the former.

Envoy Visits Exhibit

The Ambassador of the Netherlands, E. N. van Kleffens, accompanied by Dr. N. A. C. Slotemaker de Bruine, embassy counselor, visited the Queen Wilhelmina golden jubilee exhibit of state documents at the National Archives yesterday.

The Ambassador, who has loaned a portrait of Queen Wilhelmina for the exhibit, told Wayne C. Grover, Archivist of the United States, that aside from its other interests, the exhibit through the signatures attached to the state papers illustrated the development of the Netherlands as a constitutional monarchy.

The exhibit, which ends next Thursday night, features beautifully decorated treaties with wax seals in gold and silver boxes, and hand-inscribed ceremonial letters.

Win 15-Day Air Trip

As winners of an essay contest, two Georgetown University students will leave Washington at 3 p. m. Saturday for a 15-day trip by plane to Guatemala.

The students are Paul McBrearty, 22, of Detroit, Mich., and William H. Kearns, 24, of Newton, Mass. Both are juniors in the university's school of foreign service and members of the Circule Cultural Espanol Club on the campus.

The trips were offered as a prize by the Ambassador of Guatemala, Don Ismael Gonzales-Arevalo, for the best essays on "Why I Would Like to Go to Guatemala."

Numbers Case Sentence

Riley Beam, 48, of 517 S. Royal st., Alexandria, a former Alexandria city dog catcher, was fined $300 and sentenced to 90 days in jail yesterday in Alexandria Police Court for writing numbers.

Police Officer Andrew Benarick said that when he arrested Beam August 25 in a car parked in the 600 block of S. Pitt st., Beam tried to eat the slips he was writing. The slips were retrieved by Benarick after a brief scuffle, the officer said.

Thieves Slake Thirst

Thieves with a thirst made off with 15 half-gallon bottles of whisky sometime Tuesday night from Brown's Liquor Store, 1432 New Jersey ave., police were told yesterday. Mrs. Rose Brown, owner of the store, said entry was made through a transom.

G. B. Rawlings, D. C. Native, Dies in Boston

George B. Rawlings, 55, Boston attorney and a native of Washington, died yesterday at his Boston home of a heart attack.

Mr. Rawlings graduated in 1910 from Central High School, where he was prominent in sports, particularly baseball and track. After attending the National School of Law here for one year, he finished his legal training at Boston University Law School.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. on Saturday in Boston.

His wife, Mrs. Ethel Rawlings; two daughters, Mrs. Ethel Malcolm of Boston and Mrs. Helen O'Connor of San Diego, and a sister, Miss Helen L. Rawlings of 435 New Jersey ave. se. survive.

John Thomas Sullivan

Funeral services for John Thomas Sullivan, 74, church worker, of 1332 Belmont st. nw., will be held Saturday at 8:30 a. m. at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin st. nw., followed by a mass at St. Paul's Catholic Church, 15th and V sts. nw., at 9. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Sullivan died Wednesday at Gallinger Hospital after an illness starting with a heart attack on August 13.

He was active in local church circles since moving here from New Castle, Del., 13 years ago. He was a member of the Nocturnal Adoration Society at St. Matthew's Cathedral and also of the Holy Name Society of Our Lady of Victory Church. At the latter he was a sexton between 1938 and 1940.

A bachelor and the last of 12 children, Mr. Sullivan lived with his sister, Mrs. Mary E. Reedy at 5056 MacArthur blud. nw., for most of his time in Washington. She died six months ago.

Born in Salem, N. J., Mr. Sullivan spent most of his life in New Castle, Del., where he was a city councilman in 1912. Before this he was employed by the Morris Tasker Ironworks and later ran a cigar store for a number of years.

Survivors include a nephew, Michael J. Reedy, and a niece, Mary E. Reedy, both of 6424 Luzon ave. nw.

Rev. Thomas C. Darst

Wilmington, N. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—A heart attack yesterday claimed the life of the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, D. D., retired bishop of the Episcopal diocese of eastern North Carolina. He was 73.

A native of Pulaski, Va., and a graduate of the Virginia Theological Seminary, Bishop Darst served a number of parishes in Virginia before being consecrated bishop in 1915.

Funeral services have been set tentatively for 3 p. m. Friday at St. James Episcopal Church here.

Survivors include his wife, the former Miss Lauriston Hardin; three sons, George W. Darst of Washington, D. C., Thomas C. Darst, jr., Pinehurst, and Meade Darst, Southport; and one daughter, Mrs. John Smith, Raleigh.

Kenneth B. Warner

West Hartford, Conn., Sept. 2 (AP).—Kenneth B. Warner, 53, for more than 29 years secretary and general manager of the American Radio Relay League, died unexpectedly today at his home here.

Survivors include his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Paul Averitt of Arlington, Va., and a grandson, Neil Averitt.

Last Rites Scheduled Today For J. M. Shull, Botanist

The Washington Post

PASSES—J. Marion Shull and his lilies

The prize-winning day lilies and iris in the Chevy Chase garden of J. Marion Shull will no longer have that extra care they received for many years.

Mr. Shull, who was as well known for his artistic flowers and plants as for his scientific acumen as a botanist, with the Department of Agriculture, died Wednesday at Suburban Hospital.

He was found unconscious at his home, 207 Raymond st., Tuesday evening by neighbors who told police they had missed seeing him around during the day. He remained in a coma until his death at 9:05 a. m. Wednesday.

Dr. Frank S. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, yesterday issued a certificate of death from cerebral hemorrhage. Hospital physicians said Mr. Shull evidently had been stricken several hours before being found at his home.

A funeral service will be held at 3 p. m. today at Chevy Chase funeral home, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Shull was born January 23, 1872, in Clark County, Ohio. His contribution to the world of science, letters and art is outlined in "Who's Who in America," along with the accomplishments of four brothers, all of whom are outstanding academicians.

Mr. Shull attended Valparaiso University and the Art Students' League in New York before he was married in 1906 to Addie Virginia Moore, who died in 1937. They had two children, Francis Marion Shull, now an engineer with Eastman Kodak Co. in Rochester, N. Y., and Miss Virginia Moore Shull, both of whom survive their father.

After teaching music and art in Midwestern colleges and public schools for three years, Mr. Shull was a commercial artist in Memphis, Tenn., until 1906. He then became associated with the Postoffice Department, and in 1907 came to Washington with the United States Forest Service as dendrological artist.

He was botanical artist with the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture from 1909 until 1925. For the next 17 years he was associate botanist until his retirement in 1942.

Among his numerous awards for excellence in botanical research and plant development were the Silver Medal and the Distinguished Service Medal of the American Iris Society.

Mr. Shull was a member of the American Horticultural Society, the National Carillon Association, as well as of the American Iris Society.

Besides his son and daughter, he leaves his second wife, Mrs. Mary L. Shull, who was visiting her family and relatives in New York State at the time of his death.

He also leaves a sister, Mrs. A. L. Bissett of Salt Lake City, Utah, and five brothers, John William Scholl, professor emeritus of modern languages at the University of Michigan; George Harrison Shull, professor emeritus of botany and genetics at Princeton University; Charles Albert Shull, professor emeritus of plant physiology at the University of Chicago; Aaron Franklin Shull, professor of zoology at the University of Michigan, and S. P. Shull, a teacher in Greenfield, Ohio.

Capt. Stuart's Burial Today In Arlington

Funeral services for Capt. Frank Meagher Stuart, 61, World War I Army engineer and retired valuation engineer with the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. The Rev. Franklin J. Bohanan, rector emeritus of the Rock Creek Parish of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, will officiate.

Capt. Stuart

Military and Masonic rites will follow at the graveside in Arlington Cemetery.

Captain Stuart died unexpectedly Tuesday at his home, 36 Hamilton st. nw. Death was attributed to acute congestive heart failure and coronary thrombosis.

Born in Aurora, Ill., in 1887, he was the son of John T. Stuart, a Union Pacific Railroad employe, and Mrs. Frances Meagher Stuart. Captain Stuart attended public schools in North Platte, Nebr. He was graduated in 1908 from the Rose Polytechnic Institute in Terre Haute, Ind., and in 1910, from the Highland Park College in Des Moines, Iowa.

Captain Stuart served overseas for more than a year and participated with the Army's Twenty-second Engineers in the St. Mihiel drive, the battle of the Meuse Argonne and the Defense Sector in the battle for France. In December, 1920, he was put on the Army Reserve list.

After World War I, Captain Stuart was a construction engineer for the Union Pacific Railroad in the Middle West until 1925.

Captain Stuart was a thirty-second degree Mason and Knights Templar of Des Moines, Iowa, the Lebanon Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star here, the Washington Chapter of the American Society of Military Engineers, the Five Point Club, a group of ICC Masons, and he was a former vestryman for the Rock Creek parish of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. F. Adrienne Stuart, who was president of the Petworth Women's Club from 1940 to 1942; recording secretary of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers many years ago, and from 1946 to 1947 president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Rock Creek parish of St. Paul's Church.

Captain Stuart also leaves a daughter, Mrs. Maurine S. Dulin of Bethesda, Md.; a sister, Mrs. Irene Jacobs of Los Angeles, Calif., and two granddaughters.

VFW Urges Strict Curb on Communists

St. Louis, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—The Veterans of Foreign Wars today urged Federal and State governments to curb the privileges of Communists to halt "their nefarious activities."

The 49th annual encampment of the VFW, in a resolution urging passage of the Mundt-Nixon bill to outlaw the Communist Party, described Communists as agents "for a foreign police state engaged in mass destruction of our liberties."

The convention praised the House Un-American Activities Committee and asked that it be given power to subpena Government records.

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, told the veterans that strength of national defense "lies in well-balanced, integrated air, land and naval forces, mutually dependent and working together."

In its naval aviation, Denfeld said, the United States will hold "a priceless advantage over any enemy" in any future war.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, told the convention, in the final address, that the current peacetime draft is "only a start" toward making the Nation safe in a troubled world. "It won't provide training for all the citizens," he said, "and such training is a must.

"We live in a troubled world only by strength," Hershey said. "And no matter how atomic the age, or how much machinery there is, we need men to do the driving."

The question of racial segregation caused an uproar when a resolution was introduced at a morning business session which would have required the VFW to hold its encampments in cities where there is no segregation of races.

After the committe on Americanism recommended turning down the resolution, Albert H. Jones and Joseph W. Robbins, Negro delegates from Chicago, stood up to protest.

"We Negroes have been insulted on almost every corner since we've been in St. Louis," Robbins shouted.

The resolution was finally tabled upon motion of Frank Loyal, Augusta, Ga.

Other resolutions urged the Government to establish a secondary market for the purchase of VA or FHA mortgages which any private lender wishes to sell and for the extension of GI loan privileges to widows of veterans and educational benefits to their children.

SOUNDING A LETTER—Blind Mrs. Ruth Nichols "writes" letter on recorder

Blind 'Write' to Blind With Electronic Recording Device

A tiny electronic recording device is lighting the way, by means of sound, to self-support for Mrs. Bernard R. Nichols, a 28-year-old woman who has been blind since birth.

She is the "model pupil" of a training course being developed by the National Society for the Blind, Inc., with headquarters in Washington. She has been holding down a job with a local insurance company for two weeks now, thanks to the device.

Using the apparently simple contrivance, Mrs. Nichols, who lives at 2100 N st. nw., not only supplements the income of her husband, who has been blind for 27 years; she also gets a chance to "correspond" with persons she's been out of touch with for years.

How It Works

Here's how it works:

A turntable about the size of a portable typewriter holds a 9-inch "record," which looks like a disc of dark colored wax paper.

The operator flicks a switch and speaks into a receiver built like an earphone.

He completes the message, reverses the switch, and his words are spoken back through the same "receiver."

At her job, Mrs. Nichols plays one of the "records," on which her employer has dictated a list of names, addresses and phone numbers. She then dials a number, makes an appointment with the party and jots the result down on a Braille slate.

Furthermore, she can carry the recorder home at night and "write" letters to her friends.

That's how she corresponded with her husband while she was on vacation in southwestern Virginia. She merely spoke her piece, removed the disc, folded it up and mailed it in an envelope. When it arrived here, her husband went over to a friend's house, borrowed his machine and "heard from his wife."

The National Society for the Blind, according to its executive director, Raymond W. Radcliffe, has in mind other uses for the recorder, such as:

1. In schools, so that blind students may have portions of textbooks read aloud only once, after which they may study their lessons by constant repetition of selected passages.

2. In libraries, so blind persons may drop in and make a "recording" to send elsewhere or play one that he has received.

The society offers free training in use of the machine. It will also arrange for its purchase by blind persons, plus a set of about two dozen discs, at wholesale price, according to Radcliffe.

Each "record," he pointed out, can be used about 100 times simply by wiping it off with a special brush after each run.

Crash Victims Wed As Hospital Patients

Meriden, Conn., Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Wearing a pale pink negligee with an orchid corsage, Katalin Balme, 29, New York City, was married in Meriden Hospital today to George Cox, 47, East Orange, N. J. The bride took her vows while sitting in a wheel chair with her head in a brace, but the bridegroom was unable to leave his bed. They were injured July 25 when the private plane which he was piloting crashed as it approached an airport near here.

Argentina Expects ECA Funds From France

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Government-controlled newspapers today quoted government sources that the Economic Cooperation Administration had authorized France to spend dollars in Argentina under the Marshall Plan.

(In Washington, sources close to the ECA denied knowledge of these reports, but said it was highly possible that such negotiations may be proceeding. They emphasized, however, that approval of the use of ECA dollars for such purposes could not be granted until a detailed report on prices and other terms is submitted to Washington.)

Nationalists Evacuate Airfield NearChangchun

Nanking, China, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Nationalist troops have evacuated the airfield west of Changchun, prewar capital of Manchuria, a military spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Chang Lu-Ssu, said the airfield was far from the city and "hard to defend." The government captured it August 27 only to take its equipment and supplies, he claimed.

Evicted Baby Dies After Nights in Park

The 4-week-old baby boy of a Hillside, Md., couple died yesterday after spending three nights in a park with his parents, who had been evicted from their home about two weeks ago.

Foster P. Russ, a painter, who has nine other children, said yesterday he had sent his wife and the baby to Philadelphia on Wednesday after the baby had become ill.

They were desperate after spending three nights in a District park, he said, and decided she must take the baby to her brother's in Philadelphia. The baby died there, he learned yesterday from a telegram. He said he did not know the immediate cause of death.

Since he and his family were evicted from their Hillside home on August 17, because the owner wanted the house for his own use, he had placed seven of the children in foster homes, Russ said. There are also two older ones, one of whom, a girl, is staying with relatives in New Jersey, while the other, a youth, is in the Navy.

Russ, who said his family had been turned down as tenants because of the large number of children, said the baby, William Earl Russ, remained at Children's Hospital for two days after his wife was released, five days following his birth, he said.

Since the eviction, the three have stayed with relatives until Sunday, when, he said, he was unable to remain any longer and decided to sleep outdoors.

"It's a shame for this to happen to an American citizen. I am willing to pay for a house or apartment but no one wants me with my family," he said yesterday as he left for Philadelphia to be with his wife.

At the Hitt Decorating Co., 1519 N. 18th st., Arlington, Va., officials said Russ had worked there for three years and has been a good workman.

Why AMERICAN has not raised its DC-6 fares

On September 1st, DC-6 and Constellation fares were raised 10 per cent by the transcontinental air lines—with the single exception of American Airlines. On American you can enjoy luxurious DC-6 service at no increase in cost.

American Airlines has not raised its DC-6 fares because to do so would be inconsistent with the basic philosophy by which American always has operated—namely, that the price of air transportation must be kept within the reach of the average customer.

Air transportation has many advantages for the American people. It enables the man from the armed forces to add days to his furlough. It permits parents and grandparents to visit the children more often. It enables the businessman to cover the country and still be at home with the family.

We believe that this modern way of travel should be available to all of the people—and, if not to all, then certainly to as many as possible. We want the advantages of air transportation to continue to be available to YOU. That is the reason why we have refused to "join up" in adding 10 per cent to the cost of your DC-6 Flagship journey.

If you believe that the way to keep prices down is not to raise them . . . if you want to save money and at the same time enjoy the finest air transportation, you will travel on American's DC-6 Flagships. Call American Airlines or your travel agent.

Terps' Big Scoring Ace Counted Out By 2-1 Vote

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Sept. 2.—Maryland today lost its fight to preserve the eligibility of Lu Gambino.

By a 2-1 vote, the Southern Conference executive committee ruled that the Terrapins' All-Southern halfback "is no longer eligible to compete in intercollegiate football at a Southern Conference Institution."

Col. Geary Eppley, faculty chairman of athletics at Maryland and a member of the executive committee, presented the Gambino case to the group and voted to allow Gambino to play.

He was outvoted by Col. D. S. McAlister of The Citadel and Dr. H. A. Fisher of North Carolina State.

Col. William Couper of Virginia Military Institute, the conference president who told The Washington Post on August 14 that Gambino was ineligible, did not vote.

A Four-Hour Session

The committee's decision was reached after a four-hour meeting behind locked doors in a suite at the Hotel John Marshall here. There was other business discussed at today's session, but Colonel Couper said "it was routine also."

In presenting Maryland's appeal to the committee, Eppley based his case for Gambino on what he termed "equity."

He asked that Gambino be allowed to play this year, which would have been his fourth year of varsity competition, "inasmuch as there are a number of athletes in the conference today playing their fifth and sixth year of varsity competition.

"Therefore, Maryland does not consider it fair to limit the eligibility of Gambino to three years, especially since he is a former GI."

To this, the executive committee said: "The request was given sympathetic consideration and full discussion. The principal plea was that the Southern Conference rules permitted men who were in the armed forces and who were assigned by such services to a college to play in intercollegiate athletics without having such competition count. This, of course, is true, but it was the action and desire at the time of the conference.

"No Longer Eligible"

"The executive committee does not make the rules; its functions, among other things, is to interpret them where they are not clear. In the Gambino case the facts are not in dispute and are as follows:

" 'Lucian Anthony Gambino matriculated at Indiana University on September 23, 1941—he played on the freshman team and received a numeral for the 1941 season. In 1942 he again played on the football team, in that year on the varsity, and played in nine games averaging more than 17 minutes per game and was awarded a letter. He withdrew from Indiana University after the football season.

Redskins Beat Rams, 21-10, in Upset

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ON A DAY WHEN Baseball Commissioner Chandler was apparently entitled to strike a pose in the best tradition of the late Judge Landis and take a bow for getting tough with his employers, there is a dissenting voice. Clark Griffith harrumphs that Chandler didn't crack down with enough vigor on the Pittsburgh Pirates.

POVICH

What the Commissioner did was to whack the Pirates with a $2000 fine for attempting to "cover up" a bonus player by the subterfuge of giving the boy's father a part-time job as a scout. He also fined the Pirates' farm system director $500 and declared the boy a free agent. It appeared to be quick and direct punishment of the Pirates. But Clark Griffith is unappeased.

"He should have fined 'em $5000 and booted the people responsible for the thing out of the game for at least three years," snorts Griffith. "That's a recommendation I made at our last meeting and they tabled it until December. If we are going to have the bonus rule, and it's a good one, we need teeth in it to scare off these people who are always trying to sign boys under the table."

THEN THIS was criticism of Chandler? "Oh, no," said Griffith. "I'm a Chandler man. The commissioner knows that I stand with him and that he has been doing a splendid job since he took over the most important position in our game. He could have acted more tough in this case, that's all. What we need is teeth in our rules so he can enforce them better, and I think Mr. Chandler liked my recommendation for a $5000 minimum."

In case you haven't heard of the bonus rule, it's a device of the clubowners to curb the frenzied bidding for young players that has sent skyrocketing payments to rookies for signing. The richer clubs found themselves paying $30,000, $40,000, and even $60,000 for wet-eared young school graduates. The bonus rule sought to discourage such wild gambling in talent by classifying as a "bonus player" any youth whose payment for signing plus his salary exceeded $6000 for the first year.

The "bonus" players" became a special class. The major league club was compelled to call him up to the majors at the end of one year. He couldn't be farmed out again for seasoning. No club could load up with too many bonus players, and the high bidding would cease, or a least be curbed. It was supposed to halt the wild speculation in young talent.

CHANDLER'S action in the Pittsburgh case deprived the Pirates of the players, a 21-year-old lad named Dan Lynch, whom the Pirates farmed out to Waco. The player was the prime beneficiary of the ruling. He came a free agent, able now to peddle his services to the highest bidder in addition to pocketing all the money he received from the Pirates.

Griffith wouldn't stop at fining and suspending the club convicted of violating the bonus rule. He's demanding that the player involved also be suspended for three years. At first glance, that appears a bit harsh. It was pointed out to Griffith that boys are sometimes easily persuaded to sign contracts without full knowledge of the restrictions and perhaps in innocence of the bonus ruling.

"That's nonsense," says Griffith. "The players shouldn't be exempted from the punishment, either. These young fellows who know they have big league opportunity are wise about the workings of the bonus rules. They know what is right and what is wrong. Their parents shop around for them. I know, because I've talked to many of them, and they know what they're talking about when it's a matter of bonus contracts."

At that, Commissioner Chandler appears entitled to some applause in the current case. The evidence shows that he made a thorough investigation of the case, even to the point of showing that Lynch, sr., after being ostensibly signed as a scout, never turned in any scouting report to the Pirates this season.

Noteworthy, too, is the fact that when Chandler did crack down, it was against Pittsburgh Owner Frank McKinney, personal friend of the commissioner, who played a part in bringing McKinney into the major league.

Right now, Chandler is reportedly considering a new crackdown on the Detroit Tigers with nine Tiger farmhands under suspicion as figures in cover-up deals. He is expected to deprive the Detroit club of all of them. Chandler, who signed the death warrant that sent 22 Kentucky criminals to the chair during his term as Governor, is hardly a softie. Boseball said it wanted a tough commissioner, and that it has.

Turnesa, Billows, Dahlbender, Coe Win

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 2 (AP).—Ray Billows, a laughing printing salesman from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., smashed Frank Stranahan's bid for a golfing "little slam" today by blasting the Toledo titan, 6 and 5, in the quarter-finals of the forty-eighth United States amateur championship.

So it's two seasoned New York campaigners—Billows and little Willie Turnesa—and a pair of youngsters from the warm belt—Oklahoma City's Charlie Coe and Atlanta's Gene Dahlbender—in the round of four tomorrow over the 6617-yard Memphis Country Club course.

The lineup for the 36-hole tests sends Billows against Coe, a 24-year-old former Big Seven college champion, and Dahlbender, third round conqueror of Defending Champion, Robert (Skee) Riegel, against Turnesa, the amateur member of the famous golfing family.

He Defeats Ward

Turnesa became the only survivor of the original eight United States and British titleholders as upsets continued to dominate the event that has been rocked by upheavals since the second day.

The Elmsford, N. Y., stroker, who won the National in 1938 and the British Amateur in 1947, eliminated Marvin (Bud) Ward, two-time champion from Spokane, Wash., in a great morning match, 3 and 1. Then he disposed of Bruck McCormick, the 39-year-old former fireman and Publinx champion from Hollywood, Calif., 2 and 1.

Coe, one of the tournament's smoothest swingers, expelled Julius Boros of Bridgeport, Conn., 4 and 3, and then triumphed over Arthur Armstrong of Honolulu, the Hawaiian champion, by the same margin.

Pirates Fined On Violation Of Bonus Rule

Cincinnati, Sept. 2 (AP).—Hanging a $2000 fine on the Pittsburgh Pirates today, Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler began carrying out a warning he issued a month ago that clubs violating the rules of the game would be punished severely.

The Pirates were charged with breach of the bonus rule by signing M. Dan Lynch, sr., of Dallas to a scouting contract at the same time young Danny Lynch was signed to a $6000-a-year contract.

Raymond Kennedy, director of the Pittsburgh farm system, was fined $500, the player declared a free agent, and the father's contract nullified.

Young Lynch, a second baseman and shortstop, from Southern Methodist University, was assigned to Waco in the Big State League after being signed last June 3 by Pittsburgh. Manager Buster Chatham of Waco, said he will be pulled from the lineup immediately.

"No Escaping Conclusion"

"There is no escaping the conclusion that the signing of Lynch, sr., on the part of the Pittsburgh organization, was designed to encourage the boy to sign a Pittsburgh contract," Chandler said in his action today. "M. Dan Lynch,

New York, Sept. 2.—The Nats tomorrow move into the pennant picture in a back-hand sort of way. They clash with the second-place Yankees in a double-header that opens a four-game series, which, at least for the Yankees' pennant hopes, is somewhat crucial.

The eyes of the Rew Sox and Indians will also be on the Nats in the Yankee series, what with only a game and a half separating the first and third place clubs. Anything less than three wins in the four games for the Yankees will be viewed as a solid contribution by the Nats to the pennant chances of Boston and Cleveland.

For one of tomorrow's games, Forest Thompson is being returned to a starting role by Manager Joe Kuhel. Early Wynn will pitch the other. Thompson's last contribution to the Nats was a one-third inning job in which he disposed of one White Sox batter with the bases full in the ninth to preserve a 5-4 lead.

Manager Kuhel is finding his player list swelled by the edition of Rookie Dick Weik, up from Chattanooga. Young Weik may even get a starting chance in the New York series. At Chattanooga he was fondly regarded for his fire ball, but his control, or lack of it, was shocking.

Kuhel heard today from Boss Man Clark Griffith that Shortstop Sammy Meeks, the spring-training sensation, is en route to the Nats from their Charlotte farm. Meeks has been hitting .318 for Charlotte and will report next week, if Charlotte does not get into the Tri-State League playoffs, which is a high possibility.

The Nats enter the series in a novel sort of position—they own a two-game winning streak, thanks to a pair of engagement with the last-place White Sox.

Dan Sandifer Scores On 84-Yd. Run

Los Angeles, Calif, Sept. 2.—After suffering three consecutive beatings at the hands of Los Angeles, the underdog Washington Redskins reared up and handed the Rams a 21-10 lacing in their first exhibition of the season tonight before 77,492 fans in Memorial Coliseum.

Lieut. Glenn Davis, former Army great, was completely stifled by the hard-charging Redskin line that dominated the game.

He was embarrassed particularly in the third period when Rookie Dan Sandifer of L.S.U. took a Waterfield punt on his own 16 and raced to a sensational 84-yard score. On the Rams' 20, Sandifer feinted Davis so successfully that Glenn fell right on his face.

The 'Skins may have suffered a serious casualty, Eddie Saenz, who gained 44 yards, was carried off the field on a stretcher in the second period. At Queen of Angels Hospital it was feared he had a fractured left ankle and X-rays were taken.

FIRST PERIOD

The 'Skins won the toss and elected to receive. Dick Todd got them off to a running start for the 1948 campaign when he took the opening kickoff on his 10 and raced 23 yards.

After an exchange of kicks, the Redskin running attack ground out huge chunks of yardage.

Eddie Saenz hit center for 12 yards and a first down on the 'Skin 37. He made four more and Big Sal Rosato burst through for another first down on the Los Angeles' 49.

Tatum Tells Gambino Bad News at Practice

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Lu Gambino got the bad news on the practice field yesterday but Coach Jim Tatum insisted that Maryland wasn't through fighting for its All-American halfback.

Tatum said he would request President Harry C. (Curly) Byrd to institute a poll of all Southern Conference schools in an effort to override the ineligibility ruling made at Richmond by the Executive Committee.

Dr. Byrd gave this statement: "As far as I'm concerned, the decision is so unfair that I do not care to discuss the matter at this time."

Practice was nearly over on the College Park campus when Tatum undertook the unpleasant task of telling Gambino the vote had gone against him.

Lu was a heartbroken boy. He listened stoically with his head bowed.

A few minutes later, Tatum called the squad together and officially informed the rest of the boys of the committee's action. He really didn't have to. They had seen the look on Lu's face when Tatum broke the news.

At first, Gambino said he had "nothing" to say about the decision. Later, after the first shock wore off, he said his future plans will be guided by "what Mr. Tatum tells me."

He'll Stick Around

"I know he has my welfare at heart," Gambino added. "All I know is that I wanted more than anything to play for Maryland this season.

"I'll stick around as long as possible. When I know there's a final decision, then I'll try to figure out what to do."

Gambino said he's eager to get his degree at Maryland and may even forego pro football this season.

Tatum plainly was flabbergasted by the ineligibility ruling. The big Carolinian had been confident that the committee was going to vote for Gambino.

"I can't see how anyone could vote against him," he said, shaking his head, "and we won't give up until we make a last stand."

Tatum cited the case of North Carolina's Hosea Rogers as one of the many players in the Southern Conference who's playing his fifth year of varsity ball. Rogers played at Alabama in 1942 and North Carolina in 1946 and '47 when he wasn't in the service and in 1943 when he was a Navy trainee at North Carolina. This will be his fifth season.

"It seems to me the conference is discriminating against Gambino, an enlisted man," said Tatum. "No provision has been made for boys like him. I'll admit there's nothing in the rules to interpret that he can play—but, at the same time, there's nothing that says he can't.

"I can't believe 15 schools will vote against him."

Who'll Carry?

Asked who will do the ball-carrying if Gambino is ruled off the squad, Tatum said it was a hard question to answer.

"Gambino was just about our running attack," Tatum said. "I don't think there are 10 men in the country—college or pro—who can run with him. He runs better to his left than any back I ever saw."

Without Gambino, Maryland will have to count on Jimmy LaRue, Joe Kuchta, Bernie Sniscak and Earl Roth to do its ground-gaining.

Loss of Gambino would be a terrific blow to Maryland's powerhouse team. Center Gene Kinney, the captain, summed up the club's feeling, "I think it's a dirty deal. It was a hairline case and I think Lu could have been given the break.

"I know how hard he worked and how much he wants to play. It's going to hit us hard, but I think the team will fight back and go anyway."

The news didn't make the coaching staff feel so good, either. Flucie Stewart, handling the ends, said: "There are lots of boys in the Conference who've played more college ball than this boy.

"It seems to me, it's darned unfair to Lu. He never misrepresented his eligibility status, now he comes up to his senior year and he's suddenly told he can't play."

Deacs Declare 2 Star Backs Ineligible

Wake Forest, N. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—Wake Forest's grid hopes suffered a double-blow today when two of its leading squad members were declared ineligible.

Coach D. C. Walker said the school itself declared as ineligible Anthony Dimoto, number two quarterback, and George Pryor, number one fullback and the team's leading ground gainer last year with 328 yards in 93 attempts.

Ditomo, who has actually played but three years of college football, was chopped under a ruling which says three years of varsity ball is the maximum. Ditomo's first year, 1942 at Temple, was varsity football. Because of the war he skipped over the freshman stage.

Pryor, who has played but two years of varsity football, was caught under a ruling which says a gridster must play his allotted time within five years, excluding time out for years in the service. His first play in college ranks was in 1940, when he was on the Deacons freshman squad.

The squad held a couple of two-hour workouts. Time was devoted mostly to reviewing fundamentals and other general topics. There has yet to be any heavy or contact work.

Anacostia Player Cut Off by Giants

Superior, Wis., Sept. 2 (AP).—Halfback Robert (Flash) Gordon, former Anacostia High of Washington, D. C., player, was among four players put on the waiver list today by the New York Giants of the National Football League.

Others dropped with the Guilford, N. C., College alumnus were Pete Lanzi, an end from Youngstown College; Stan Stapley, Brigham Young tackle, and Ken Wiltgen, Northwestern end. Their departure will cut the Giants' squad to 42, 7 over the league limit.

Dodgers Barely Cling to Lead, Losing Again to Cubs, 7-6

Chicago, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs made it three out of four over Brooklyn in the current four-game series when they defeated the National League leaders today, 7-6.

The winning run was shoved over in the sixth inning when Roy Smalley walked, was sacrified to second and sent over the plate on a single by Emil Verban.

Johnny Schmitz, ace Cub lefthander, pitched the last four innings and was credited with the victory. It was his sixth triumph over the Dodgers this season.

The loss at Brooklyn's lead to 2 percentage points.

to punch holes in the Ram line and then Baugh passed to Bob Nussbaumer for 16 yards and a first down on the 3.

On second down, Huffman of the Rams recovered Quirk's fumble on the 2, and a punt put the Rams out of danger.

That was the only scoring threat of the first period, which ended scoreless.

SECOND PERIOD

Jim Hardy engineered a Ram aerial attack which racked up three first downs, but the Skins held on their own 28, and then went 72 yards in 11 plays to score.

Baugh nailed Todd with a pass that was good for 59 yards. Cowhig overhauled Todd when he was in the clear and brought him down on the Ram 13. A holding penalty temporarily halted Washington, but an interference penalty gave the Redskins a first down on the 12.

On fourth down, 6 yards away from pay dirt, Baugh passed to Mont, who caught the ball on the 3 and walked over. Poillon's kick made it 7-0.

After another punt swap Hardy began hitting with his passes again. Davis caught one good for 14 yards, and a first down on the 29 and another toss to Banta was good for 7. Hardy overshot the mark with Davis free in the end zone. Hardy was stopped on a quarterback sneak and Waterfield came in to kick a field goal from the 29 to make the score 7-3 in favor of Washington with two minutes remaining in the quarter.

Saenz was removed from the field by stretcher bearers after returning the next kickoff to his own 36-yard line. Todd gained 3 at right tackle as the half ended.

Statistics heavily favored the Redskins in the first two periods. Led by Saenz's 44 yards, their running game was good for 90 yards net, and Baugh's 4 completions in 9 pass attempts added another 85. The Rams were held to 39 yards on the ground, Davis having a net gain of 2 in as many tries. Hardy completed 8 passes in 11 for 69 yards.

THIRD PERIOD

On the first scrimmage play of the third quarter, Hoerner ran 11 yards for a first down on the Ram 30, but Los Angeles stalled here and Waterfield kicked a long one to Nussbaumer, who returned it 3 yards to his own 13.

Farmer fumbled, Banta recovering for the Rams on the 18. Banta skirted left end for 5 and Washington cracked center for a first down on the 3. Hoffman was smeared for a 2-yard loss by Stasiak but Washington roared around right end, crashing through three tacklers for a touchdown. Waterfield's conversion kick put the Rams in front, 10-7.

The 'Skins struck like lightning several minutes later when Dan Sandifer, rookie halfback from LSU, took Waterfield's punt on the 16 and ran 84 yards to a touchdown. He faked Glenn Davis so well on the Ram 20 that Glenn just fell on his face. Poillon kicked the goal to give the Redskins a 14-10 margin.

FOURTH PERIOD

Nussbaumer made a first down to the 27 and Todd picked up five on a pass, but Gehrke intercepted Baugh's pass in the end zone to stifle the threat.

Washington's line, completely outplaying the Rams, stopped them cold and Waterfield punted out on the Redskin 33.

Mont was forced to punt, and he got off a long one that Davis took on the three and was nailed immediately by McKee.

Waterfield again kicked out, Todd returning 22 yards to the 23. Dick then cut back for 19 to the 4-yard line. Quirk smashed center twice for 3 yards and on the next play he scored. Poillon made it 21-10 with a placement.

Singles Test Slated for Saturday

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Frankie Parker of Los Angeles, top-ranking amateur tennis player in the United States, will meet Billy Sidwell of Australia in the opening singles match of the Davis Cup challenge round at Forest Hills Saturday afternoon.

The second singles test will send Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif., against the veteran Adrian Quist, captain of the Australian forces.

The pairings were determined today when C. V. Kellway, Australian Consul General in New York, drew the names out of the Davis Cup in a brief ceremony at the West Side Tennis Club, where the five-match series will be held.

The singles pairings will be reserved for the two concluding matches Monday afternoon. According to the draw, Schroeder will play Sidwell in the first match Monday, with Parker facing Quist in the final match.

Quist and Alrick H. Man, Jr., non-playing captain of the United States team had not announced their singles nominations until they dropped the names into the big silver trophy for the draw.

The two captains said they would not disclose their doubles lineups until after the singles play on Saturday.

Bill Talbert of New York and Gardnar Mulloy of Miamf, Fla., are expected to handle the doubles assignment for the United States. They recently defeated Parker and Schroeder in the finals of the National doubles tournament.

Sidwell, who won both his singles matches when the Aussies defeated Czechoslovakia, 3-2, in the inter-zone finals recently, may also be named to a doubles berth for the finals. Quist is expected to break up the Australian combination of Colin Long and Geoff Brown, which lost to the Czech doubles team.

Singles matches on Saturday and Monday will begin at 1 p. m., EST. The doubles test Sunday will begin at 1:30 p. m., EST, with an exhibition mixed doubles match to follow.

Both teams started tapering off in their practice at the West Side Club today. It will be the third straight meeting of the two countries in the challenge round since the postwar renewal of the international competition.

Eagles Trip Lions, 37-35

Detroit, Sept. 2 (AP).—The reorganized Detroit Lions, cellar dwellers of the National Football League for the past two seasons, showed plenty of offensive power tonight while bowing to the Philadelphia Eagles, 37 to 35, in an exhibition game here.

The Eagles, Eastern Division champions of the NFL last year, scored twice in the first 10 minutes of play and held a 27-14 halftime lead.

Philadelphia	14	13	7	3—37
Detroit	7	7	14	7—35

Philadelphia scoring: Touchdowns—Pihos (2), Craft, Van Buren, Doss. Points after touchdown—Keuffel (4), place-kicks. Field goal—Keuffel (placement).

Detroit scoring: Touchdowns—Erke, Mann, Marguccl, Dudley, Schottell. Points after touchdown—Pregulman (5), place-kicks.

Ezzard Charles, Ready for Bivins, Due Here Today

Heavyweight Ezzard Charles is scheduled to arrive in Washington today, and when he does, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez will breathe a little easier.

Since Menendez signed Charles for a fight against Jimmy Bivins at Griffith Stadium early in the summer, the Cincinnati contender has been accused of running out and causing postponement of the match until September 13.

By arriving today, Charles and his manager, Jake Mintz, will be fulfilling a pledge they made with the District Boxing Commission that Ezzard would arrive 10 days in advance of the bout.

Charles will hold his first workout here Saturday at 2 p. m. at Turner's Arena.

Walt Kemetick Gains Finals

Walter Kemetick defeated Ernie Kientz, 4—6, 6—2, 7—5, yesterday at Reservoir courts to gain the finals of the Washington public parks tennis tournament.

The 1942 Chicago public parks king meets Frank Dunham for the District championship Saturday at 1 p. m. at Reservoir courts.

Yesterday's singles semifinals—Walter Kemetick defeated Ernie Kientz, 4—6, 6—2, 7—5. Doubles quarter-finals—Hyman Ritzenberg-Frank Dunham defeated T. E. Hitch-J. L. Fisher, 6—1, 6—2.

Today's pairings—Doubles semifinals—Dunham-Ritzenberg vs. Walt Christianson-K. La Dentel, 5:30 p. m.; Walter Kemetick-Stanley Haney vs. Kientz-Donald Nelson, 5:30 p. m.

Coss Whips Dell, Gains Net Quarterfinals

Tim Coss, top seeded in the Washington Open Tennis Tournament at Congressional Country Club, gained the quarterfinals yesterday with a 6—1, 6—1 win over Peter Dell.

Coss' opponent today is unseeded Bill Morris.

Another nip and tuck event on yesterday's agenda was the Brad Plugge-Gil Sward match. It took three sets of fast tennis for Plugge, Wilson High School's ace, to finally down Sward 3—6, 6—4, 6—0.

Yesterday's Singles Results

Juniors—Thomas defeated Clifford, 6—1, 6—0; Thomas defeated Davis, 6—0, 6—0; Johnson defeated Zavitz, 6—3, 6—2; Plugge defeated Sward, 3—6, 6—4, 6—0.

Mrs. Calvert's 94 Low Score

Mrs. G. W. Calvert's 94 was low score yesterday in an invitation tournament given by Mrs. Hale N. Dineen, chairman, for her co-workers and members of the women's committee at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. L. W. Dennis had low net of 99—15—84 but elected to take the low putts prize instead with 29. First low net then went to Mrs. James Gardner, 109—24—85; second, Mrs. E. L. Duffies, 106—19—87; third, Mrs. Frank Richey, 124—36—88.

Citation Skips $50,000 Handicap

Chicago, Sept. 2 (AP).—Calumet Farm's Citation, 3-year-old champion, will pass up the $50,000 Washington Park Handicap at Washington Park next Monday. That was the word from trainer and general manager, Ben Jones, here today.

"He's been assigned top weight of 122 pounds, and that's a lot of carry against older horses," said Jones.

Citation next will be seen in action at Belmont Park, where he is engaged in several stakes.

Series Opener May Be Oct. 5

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—With four teams in each major league still in the pennant fight, details of the 1948 World Series will not be settled until the middle of September, Charles Segar, National League publicity head, said today.

The series will open in the park of the National League winner this year and the starting date probably will depend upon whether an Eastern or Western club wins the pennant.

The major league season ends Sunday, October 3 and the world series probably will begin the following Tuesday, October 5, if an Easter nclub represents the National League, or Wednesday, October 6, if it is a Western team.

Bubby Worsham Romps Through 2 Matches in Junior Golf Meet

Gene Wolfe Also Enters Semifinals

Defending Champion Bubby Worsham snapped back after disappointing play in medal competition to win two matches yesterday at Georgetown Prep and advance to the semifinals of the District Golf Association's Junior Open Tournament.

The Wake Forest sophomore had an easy time, vaulting over Bill Diffee, 8 and 7, and Dave Clark, 6 and 5. He shot 80 on Wednesday to finish fifth in medal competition.

Gene Wolfe, comedalist, also won twice and gained the right to play Worsham this morning in one of the semifinal matches. The finals take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Gene won a one-up decision over Dick Foster and a 5-4 margin over Joe O'Brien.

Venci Winner At Timonium

Timonium, Md.—Under a brilliant ride by Johnny Tammaro, Mrs. D. N. Lee's Venci was up in time to eke out a head victory over Sun Target in the mile and one sixteenth, sixth and feature event, titled the Lochinvar, here this afternoon.

In accounting for his triumph of the year, Venci was responsible for a $12.60 payoff.

Tammaro's success was a fine way for the Baltimorean to start off his unexpected first day's activity since being set down at Marlboro. Had it not been for the decision on the part of the Maryland Racing Commission to cut short the suspension, he would not have been permitted to ride before the opening of the Bel Air meeting Septmber 15.

A gathering of 6118 witnessed the principal event.

Stanley Austin, star of yesterday's program by virtue of four winners, piloted both ends of the daily double when he rode Agency in the opener for E. N. Kratz, and J. M. Manill, jr.'s Miss Anaconda in the similarly distanced second number. The double paid $72.20 for $2.

Stuyvesant Has Drill Sept. 13

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 2.—Stuyvesant High's Flying Dutchmen hold their first football practice September 13 under the direction of their new coach, Mike Kynn.

The Dutchmen have only 11 days to whip into shape for their opening game against St. Albans of Washington, D. C. They play two other Washington teams, Woodward Prep on October 9, and DeVitt Prep on October 21. They also play St. James of Hagerstown, Md., October 2, Longwood of Olney, Md., October 16, Manassas High, Va., October 29, and Fishbourne Academy, Va., November 6.

Coach Kynn is an alumnus of Findlay College in Ohio and the University of Wisconsin. Lettermen returning are Captain Dale Tyrrell, George Burklin, Bob Smith, Rudolf Kroc, Herbert Old, Scott Lucas, Albert Schwabe and Bob Quinn.

Colts Release, Fitch, Tod Saylor

Baltimore, Sept. 2 (AP). — Coach Cecil Isbell asked for waivers today on Halfback Jack Fitch and End Tod Saylor, leaving the Baltimore Colts only two over the All-America Conference limit of 35.

Fitch, a pro rookie from North Carolina, was picked up by the Brooklyn Dodgers. Saylor completed his college playing at Lafayette College last fall.

Washington-Lee Has Benefit Game Tonight

McQuinn's Yankees, contenders for the championship in the Falls Church Inter-City League, will square off with the Falls Church A. C. tonight under the lights of Washington-Lee High School stadium in a game for the benefit of the insurance fund for the Washington-Lee athletes.

As an added attraction, Miss Washington of '48, Jody Miller, a Washington-Lee graduate, will throw out the first ball.

Schaefer and Joseph On Midget Race Card

Ed (Dutch) Schaefer and Mike Joseph will head the regular troupe of midget auto drivers at tonight's weekly seven-race program at West Lanham, Md. The first event is at 8:30, and the feature covers 50 laps or 12½ miles.

Four D. C. Teams Compete Today in Softball Regional

Allentown, Pa., Sept. 2.—Washinton, D, C., has four representatives in the Central Atlantic Regional American Softball Association tournament which opens here today.

Kavakos Grill, defending regional champion, and Thrifty Beverages, this year's Washington champion, are the Capital City's representatives in the men's competition.

Garvin's Grill, last year's regional champ, and Arcade-Pontiac, 1948 city champ, will be Washington's women's division standard bearers.

The Arcade girls have a splendid 20-2 record this season, and boast six regular .300 or better hitters. Among them is Second Baseman Sis Lewis, daughter of Manager Milton Lewis.

Yankees Recall Bauer From Blues

New York, Sept. 2 (U.P.)—In a move to bolster the club for a stretch drive in the American League pennant race, the New York Yankees today recalled Hank Bauer, 24-year-old outfielder, from the Kansas City Blues in the American Association.

Bauer was scheduled to leave for New York by plane tonight after receiving the Kansas City fans' most popular player award, prior to the Blues' night game against Minneapolis. He planned to join the Yankees for tomorrow's doubleheader against Washington at Yankee Stadium.

860 Horses Entered at Warrenton

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 3.—More than 860 entries have been received for the Warrenton Horse Show which begins here Saturday morning and lasts three days and two nights.

Judging from the strength and quality of horses, the so-called "Hunter Show of America," running for the forty-ninth straight year, will be one of the Nation's best this year. It will take place at the improved Warrenton Horse Show Grounds.

Heading the list of entries in the hunter division is Mrs. Ralph T. King's good looking chestnut gelding Final Answer, who whipped a top field to take both the green and conformation hunter titles last week at Keswick, Va. Stablemate Kathleen N. will also be out to repeat her Keswick working hunter class championship.

Offering star-studded opposition will be: Robert Faiburn's Sun Boss, Morristown, N. J.; Mrs. Page Jenning's Icecapade, Farmington, Va.; Holiday Hill Farm's well-made Really Rugged, Mentor, Ohio; Courtney Burton's Dance King, Gates Mills, Ohio; George Di Paula's Post Meridian, Baltimore, Md.; J. North Fletcher's Golden Arrow and Brandon King, Warrenton, Va., and Gregory McIntosh's Joseph's Coat, Millwood, Va.

Washington area contenders in the jumper competition will be: Fred Hughes' Black Caddy, former Mexican show team member; Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman's Lady Jack and Gray Lark; Robert C. Lee's Bonne Fillie, Cherrie McKee's Sen Sattin, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Herber's Snap Shot and Claude Owen's Sky's Image.

Fans Honor Gray's Star At Sunday Twin Bill

Buck Leonard, first baseman for the Washington Homestead Grays for 15 years, will be honored between games of a doubleheader Sunday at Griffith Stadium.

In the first game, the Indianapolis Clowns play the Kansas City Monarchs. The Grays meet the winner in the nightcap.

Two Local Champs Compete in National AAU Diving

Washington's men's and women's A. A. U. diving champions are off for Ohio and New Jersey where this weekend they'll compete in the National A. A. U. meets.

Irving Bridges, of the Ambassador Swimming Club, will try for the senior men's high board title today Saturday, Sunday and Monday in Akron, Ohio. He has been Washington's high and low board, indoor and outdoor diving champ for three straight years.

He was chosen "Mr. District of Columbia" at a contest sponsored by the A. A. U. last spring.

Miss McCutcheon, also a member of the Ambassador team, is A. A. U. senior high and low board champ of the District. She'll compete in the junior division high board competition at Lake Mohawk, N. J., Saturday and Sunday. Amount of experience in nationals decide whether an entrant is a junior or senior.

Ballston Seeks Games

Dorothy Kirby Is Upset in Western Golf

San Francisco, Sept. 2 (AP).—Blonde Alice O'Neal, 21-year-old Indiana State champion, scored the major upset of the Women's Western Amateur Golf championship today when she eliminated veteran Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, Ga., 1 up on the nineteenth hole, in their quarterfinal match over the long Olympic Club course.

Miss O'Neal, who also holds the championship of her native Indianapolis, grabbed the lead on the second hole and was never headed. Fighting Miss Kirby, twice runner-up for the National Amateur championship, astounded the gallery by staging an uphill battle to square the match at the end of the regulation 18 holes.

In other matches today, Dot Kielty, Long Beach, California State champion, gained the semi-finals with a 4 and 2 triumph over Mrs. James Ferrie, also of Long Beach.

Polly Riley, Fort Worth, Tex., eliminated Alice Bauer, Long Beach, 3 and 2, and Margaret Gunther, Memphis, Tenn., defeated Carol Diringer, Tiffin, Ohio, 6 and 5.

Dodgers, Miller's Win, 1-0, Play Softball Final

D. C. Dodgers and Miller's Steak House moved into the final game for city softball championship yesterday by identical 1-0 score.

Hymie Pollet pitched the Dodgers to their semifinal victory over Buchanan and Bill Grim shut out Jack's Grill for Miller's. Both games were played at Taft. The teams meet 6 p. m. Tuesday at Taft for the title.

Korowski's Elbow Cut Again for Bone Chips

St. Louis, Sept. 2 (AP).—Third Baseman Whitey Kurowski of the St. Louis Cardinals underwent an operation today by Dr. Robert F. Hyland, the club surgeon, for removal of a bone growth from his right elbow.

GAMBINO—From P. B4

Lu Gambino Ruled Ineligible By Conference Committee

armed forces from February 26, 1943, until February 21, 1946.

"'Having completed three years of varsity competition in intercollegiate football, after his freshman year, he is no longer eligible to compete in intercollegiate football at a Southern Conference institution.

"'This ruling conforms with that made in all shimilar cases.'"

Colonel Couper told newsmen after the meeting that Maryland could appeal to the conference as a whole, but the league prexy obviously was not acquainted with his conference's rule which states:

"The executive committee shall have final jurisdiction in all matters brought before it on athletic eligibility of students."

Gambino thus becomes the fifth topnotch outhern Conference football player to be declared ineligible this year.

Others were Leslie (Footsie) Palmer, the Nation's leading punter last year; End Bill Stanton and Tackle Jim Rees, all of North Carolina State; and End Fred Hardison of Duke.

All excpet Palmer, who misrepresented his case, were dropped because of the prewar three-year eligibility rule.

Palmer has since signed a professional contract with the Philadelphia Eagles. Stanton and Rees of North Carolina State, were declared ineligible, temporarily, by the school pending the outcome of Maryland's appeal in behalf of Gambino.

It was believed until today that Dr. Fisher, N. C., State's representative on the executive committee, would vote with Maryland. In so doing he, at the same time, would have been voting, in effect, for his two players as State planned an appeal in their behalf if Gambino was ruled eligible.

Barring Gambino brings to an end the collegiate career of one of the most colorful football players the Washington area has seen since the days of Tuffy Leemans at G. W.

The 25-year-old Cicero, Ill., native last year became the first Maryland player to be named to an All-Southern team since Jim Meade was selected in 1937. Despite his 200 pounds, he was one of the fastest men on the squad.

Gambino was the leading offensive player for Maryland last year. He scored 114 points, gaining 1067 yards for an average of 7.2 yards. In a postseason game against Georgia in the 'Gator Bowl, he scored three touchdowns and was voted the outstanding player in the tie game.

Mrs. Hunter, Swaine Tie at Indian Spring

Mrs. George Hunter and Mrs. Ruth Swaine tied for low net honors in yesterday's Ladies Day program at the Indian Spring golf course. Mrs. Hunter posted 95-21—74, while Mrs. Swaine's card showed 110-36—74.

Mrs. W. Romer of Congressional won the guest low net prize with 98-27—71. Member putting prize went to Mrs. Frank Butler with 29 putts. Mrs. Frank Mirth of Washington Golf and Country Club putted 30 times to lead the guests in that department.

AMATEUR—From P. B4

Amateur Down To Last Four

ern champion, breezed past Louis Cass of Hollywood, Calif., in the fifth round, 6 and 4, but was carried overtime by James McGonagill of Shreveport, La., in the afternoon. The Atlantan defeated McGonagill, 37-year-old oil man, 1 up, on the nineteenth.

13 Putts on First Nine

Billows scored 5 and 4 over Memphis' Billy Barrett in the morning and then poured the putts and pressure to the well-liked Stranahan.

Billows, five-time New York State champion who is playing in the National semifinals for the third time, used only 13 putts on the first nine holes as he turned with a four-hole advantage on Stranahan. There was ltitle doubt as to the match's outcome from that point.

Turnesa's magnificent scrambling tactics kept him in the running. Repeatedly in the rough, he made fine recoveries to counteract McCormick's superiority off the tees.

Turnesa rallied after being one down at the turn, squaring the match on the tenth with a par three and going ahead with a birdie four on the eleventh. He was never headed after that.

Three Shots Out of Bounds

Dahlbender, erratic with his woods, had three out of bounds balls on the front side against McGonagill, yet turned two up.

The Louisianan came back stoutly to go ahead at the fifteenth but Dahlbender won the enghteenth with a par four.

On the extra hole, McGonagill ran into a series of bad luck. He missed his drive, fell into the rough on his second shot and accidentally touched his ball after getting on the green. He took a horrendous six. Dahlbender played a normal four.

Coe hit eight greens on the front side of his quarterfinal match with Armstrong but racked up only one birdie. They turned all square.

The Oklahoman sank birdie putts on the eleventh and twelfth and won the fourteenth and fifteenth with par and birdie. He was one under for the route.

Bell Gets Nod Over Doug Ratford

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Tommy Bell, Youngstown (Ohio) welterweight contender, eked out a split decision 10-round victory tonight over Doug Ratford of Brooklyn in a listless bout at Madison Square Garden. Bell, at 148, had a big weight advantage on Ratford, who came in at 141 pounds.

Bell started fast and seemed to tire badly, while Ratford chose to spend most of the night in his own little private clamshell, offering little but elbows and the top of his head as targets.

This last of the Thursday night boxing show at the Garden drew a handful of customers. Only 3818 turned up to pay $7771.

Ex-Nat Hill Succeeds Cromwell as USC Coach

Los Angeles, Sept. 2 (AP).—Dean Cromwell, United States Olympic track team coach, officially stepped down today from the University of Southern California post he has held for 39 years.

School official announced that Jess Hill, Cromwell's assistant for the past two seasons, will succeed him. Hill is a former outfielder for the Yankees and Washington Nats.

Cromwell, who piloted the United States team through its best Olympic track and field record so far, started at USC in 1909 and has never coached anywhere else.

Indians to Recall 8 Minor Leaguers

Cleveland, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians will recall eight minor league players as soon as their respective clubs have completed their season schedules.

This was announced tonight by Tribe Business Manager Rudie Schaffer. One minor leaguer, Infielder Ray Boone of Oklahoma City, joined the Indians a few days ago.

60-Game Hockey Slate

Montreal, Sept. 2 (AP).—Governors of the National Hockey League today adopted a 60-game schedule for 1948-49, leaving the number of games unchanged from last season.

CHANDLER—From P. B4

Chandler Fines Pirates $2000

Jr., signed for the maximum amount permissible without becoming a bonus player.

"The commissioner considers the amount paid M. Dan Lynch, sr., as a scout, as actually bonus to the boy."

The senior Lynch was signed to a contract calling for $1200 a year, and received $600 in cash at the time, Chandler declared, adding:

"As of August 27, Lynch had made no report to the Pittsburgh club and there was no indication of any activity on his part that would benefit his employers."

Warning Month Ago

Just a month ago today, Chandler, in what he headed a "warning," said in a notice to all clubs:

"Since the passage of the bonus rule on February 15, 1947, club owners and those who assist them have shown extraordinary prowess in finding ways to circumvent the rule. The commissioner's office is not naive enough to be unmindful of what is going on."

He added that in an effort to sign young players "some club owners are offering contracts to players' fathers to serve as scouts, or paying off the mortgage on the family homestead, lavishly entertaining father, mother, brothers and sisters . . . and are doing many other things that really violate the rule."

"This will serve as a warning to club owners that violators who have been surreptitiously doing the things mentioned above and other things which are not specified will be severely penalized," Chandler said at the time.

S. & M. Wins Title

Kitty Casale pitched S. & M. to a 6-2 victory over FBI yesterday at Potomac Park to win the District Recreation girls' softball championship.

but we couldn't do business without him!

When you take your car to an Esso Dealer Station for gasoline, motor oil, or a complete lubrication job — you're not really "doing business" directly with Esso Standard Oil Company, even though we make the fine products you get.

Instead, these 23,000 Esso Dealers from Maine to Louisiana, are local, independent business men. You deal with the owners themselves — men who have invested their money and their initiative in building their own futures on serving you.

From many competing brands of gasoline and oil, these local business men have chosen Esso products. Year after year, they have seen first-hand evidence of the satisfaction to the buyer that Esso quality stands for.

As of today, these able business men have, on the average, handled Esso products for 12 years each. Many have bought from us for 35 and 40 years.

Obviously, we couldn't do business without these men. And naturally we're proud of them — just as proud of them as we are of the 28,000 workers who are on our company payroll.

Both groups — our own employees and these "partners" in their independent businesses — express this company's basic belief that individual enterprise, given its fair chance to earn fair rewards — is the best way and the American way to make progress with and for all the people of this country.

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1948

Mary Haworth's Mail

Divorced Woman Asks Personality Evaluation Of Divorced Man Whom She May Marry; He Is Madly Jealous Without Cause, as He Concedes

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your fine impartial judgment of people prompts me to ask your opinion of the man I may marry.

He is a professional man of substantial means, we have many esthetic interests in common, and above all, we love each other. We met a year ago, vacationing. We live in different cities and have corresponded, also visited together, frequently since.

He is divorced and so am I. He has two children and I have a son. Although his children don't live with him, nor will they in the event we marry, he has been and will continue to be a very devoted father. Also he is very devoted to my son, as I am, and they have become great pals.

There is only one flaw in his nature: he is insanely jealous of me, although he has no reason to be. He admits that he trusts me, and knows I am genuinely sincere and faithful to him; but he says he can't help his feeling, based on fear that he may lose me. He says he will never be sure of me until we are married.

What's Meaning of His Attitude?

AFTER my divorce, I established myself in a fine position that brings me in contact with many people, broadening my views of life somewhat; and while I am neither extrovert nor aggressive, I am friendly, and John construes my friendliness as implying a perhaps "personal" interest in the men with whom I must necessarily deal.

Not only is he jealous of other men, but he doesn't want to share me with any friends, at least until we are married and leading a normal life. I have told him that no person has the right to possess another to that degree, even though they may be blissfully mated; and I would welcome your views of his attitude, also your opinion as to whether his jealousy is curable.

He is not the type to cavort with other women, and was very faithful to his first wife despite their unhappiness; but he knows there is much infidelity in marriage and he holds very righteous, noble thoughts about womanhood; and ironically, I had yearned to be the wife of such a man, as my first husband's philosophy was just the opposite.

C. W.

Emotionally Damaged in Formative Period

DEAR C. W.: For all his intelligence, education and culture, John is a queer bird who would be a hairshirt intimate.

His insecurity tensions and warped attitude toward womanhood, which manifest in "noble, righteous" thoughts about the fair sex, also in well nigh hysterical distrust of his ability to be a satisfactory lover-husband, are destructive qualities to bring to marriage.

You can't cope with his jealousy, which, as he says, has its rise in his morbidly anxious personality, which may possibly tend toward paranoid illness, but more likely refers to neurotic conditioning.

In all probability, the groundwork of what ails him was laid in childhood, in experiences or training that shattered his self-confidence and invested him with a frightened, prurient concept of sexual phenomena, with the result that he constantly strives toward sainted standards for himself and the women he craves, by way of establishing a defensive barricade against ugly phantasies that dominate his unconscious and fight for expression.

Neurotics Draw Their Own Kind

ALTHOUGH you haven't asked for an estimate of your fitness for wifehood, may I suggest that you seem as ill prepared for

Pack Your Lunch Basket With Good Holiday Fare

It's Time for That End-of-Summer Picnic

By Lucia Brown

WILL it be Skyline Drive? A Chesapeake beach? Rock Creek Park? Or your own backyard?

Whichever it is, Labor Day is one of this country's prize times for a picnic.

It's the last big summer holiday of the year—a time to enjoy sitting beneath a tree on a green hillside, noting the first touch of autumn in the air, dreaming nostalgically of the season that is passing.

Yes, it's time for a picnic—that is, if it doesn't rain! And since food is one of the most important ingredients of such an expedition, we have a few suggestions today regarding the lunch basket.

There's no point in working too hard over a picnic. After all, this is a time for relaxing—and you're probably just as worn out as anybody after all that hot weather we had last week.

Sandwiches spread on the spot, and by the individual that's going to eat them, are a labor saver for the homemaker. Besides, the family will have lots of fun tossing their own Dagwood together if you provide a variety of ingredients.

Frankfurters, cheese, cold meat, onions, cucumbers, tomatoes, or any other sandwich favorites can be taken along, sliced on the spot, then big plates of them arranged near a stack of bread or buns. Be sure the salad dressing, mustard and catsup are handy for spreading purposes.

Good Spreads

Mixed sandwich spreads, made at home, can be carried along in screw-top glass jars. If the day is warm, be sure to put jars of fish or egg mixtures in a bucket beside a chunk of ice or in the refrigerated section of your picnic basket.

Grated American cheese makes a good spread if you mix a cupful of it with 3 tablespoons tomato catsup, 2 drops tabasco sauce, 1 teaspoon mixed onion and 2 teaspoons cream.

Mock ham spread is tasty. Make it of 2 cups of ground salami or luncheon meat, ½ cup finely chopped pickle, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, ½ cup finely minced celery, and ¼ cup mayonnaise. Blend well and add salt and pepper to taste.

Peanut butter and applesauce spread is easy to make. Blend together ¼ cup peanut butter, ½ cup applesauce, and ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg.

Salmon or tuna salad spread is filling and flavorful. Combine the contents of one small can of flaked salmon or tuna with 2 tablespoons chopped, mixed pickle, 1 tablespoon minced onion, ¼ cup chopped celery, and 1 teaspoon horse radish. Add salt and pepper to taste and moisten with ¼ cup mayonnaise.

Main Dish

If you have an outdoor fireplace or a portable grill available, your main dish problem is simpler—though not so simple as in the days when you could afford to buy filet mignons for the occasion!

Cheese Bobs are one solution. They're made by wrapping 1-inch cubes of American cheese in strips of bacon. The wrapped cube is speared on the end of a stick or a fork and grilled over the coals.

A Sausage Skillet is savory, smells wonderful cooking, and isn't hard to prepare outdoors. Use a pound of bulk sausage, one No. 2 can of tomatoes, a package of uncooked noodles, and 3 sliced medium-sized onions. Melt a little fat in the skillet and brown the onions lightly. Stir in the crumbled sausage and cook for 2 or 3 minutes. Add tomatoes, noodles and seasonings. Cover and let simmer for 20 to 30 minutes until noodles are tender.

Vegetables cooked outdoors add much to the feast, too. Corn is never so good as when it's boiled in a big pot over the campfire. Potatoes roasted in the ashes are a perennial favorite. Canned beans can be heated on the grill, too.

And Green Salad

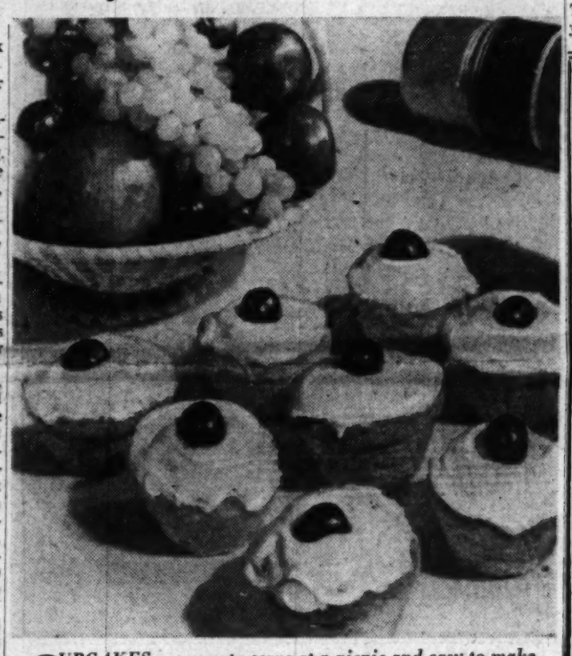
A salad is an important part of any picnic, for you need a green, crisp accompaniment for heavy, filling foods.

Fresh lettuce, carrots, radishes and cucumbers can be cut up together before leaving home and carried in a jar on the ice. Then the salad dressing can be mixed with them at the last minute at the picnic ground. They'll stay ever so much crisper and fresher this way.

Drained crushed or cubed pineapple can be taken along, accompanied by a separate jar of shredded cabbage, chopped green pepper or pimiento and nutmeats. Stir the pineapple and cabbage mixture together with some mayonnaise just before serving.

Potato salad is a long-time favorite picnic dish. Sweet-sour potato salad is a tasty type. The

See BROWN, Page 4, Column 3.



CUPCAKES are easy to serve at a picnic and easy to make, too, by this accompanying recipe. Pack them snugly side by side in a box, one layer deep, and cover over to prevent damage to the frosting.. A thermos full of Picnic Coffelate is a fine companion for these cakes. It can be served hot or cold, depending on the weather

Ask Anne: About Decorating Birthday Cake

Could you tell me where I may obtain a book giving suggestions for decorating a child's birthday cake? I have, without success, used a frosting gun, trying flowers. I would like some helpful hints on making and using such a thing (the gun). Also, what consistency should the frosting be? E. D.

In the May, 1948, issue of Women's Home Companion magazine (pages 154-155) you will find excellent cake decorating instructions with pictures to illustrate them. The particular cake being decorated in the article is a bride's cake, but the methods discussed could be used for all kinds of cake decorating.

In the article, several decorator's tricks are mentioned to make the job easier. For instance, they suggest using the side of a butter carton or any waxed cardboard, with notches cut in the edge to make a line around the cake where the decorations are to be placed. To make the line, hold the card at right angles to the frosted cake edge, the notches being on the edge next to the cake. As you pass the cardboard around the cake, the foundation icing will ooze out between the notches leaving a straight ridge which would be easy to follow with the gun. Also, they suggest using a sharp-pointed instrument such as a skewer to make the curved lines in the frosting as a guide to placing the vines or stems connecting the flowers. The skewer could also be used to outline the words, "Happy Birthday," or the honoree's name.

Before putting on the leaves and flowers, the author suggests that you practice making them on a flat surface such as a tray or bread board. This practice frosting can be scraped off the surface and used again on the cake when you feel you have achieved professional looking posies. Another suggestion: work the air out of the frosting in the mixing bowl with a spatula before putting it into the gun. This avoids a puff of air where you had wanted a flower.

The frosting should be a consistency that does not run at all—it should hold its exact shape the instant you stop stirring. To make the icing, use powdered sugar mixed with cream or milk, flavoring and a little butter or oleomargerine to keep it soft. The frosting not in use should be covered with wax paper and damp cloth to keep it pliable.

What can I make with men's old silk ties? We have accumulated dozens of them. Also, what can I make with old silk stockings? S. de S.

Several years ago, in some sections of the country, there was a fad of using attractive colored ties to make three-quarter-length lounging robes. To do this, make a foundation of unbleached muslin and then sew the pieces onto the foundation. No attempt should be made to make the pieces the same size or shape as in a patch-work quilt. As a matter of fact, the robe is more interesting because each piece is a different shape and size—like a crazy quilt. The lines where the pieces meet are embroidered with blanket, feather, or chain stitches in varying colored embroidery thread to contrast with the color of the pieces which each bit of stitchery borders. To one interested in such work, it could provide many hours of fun blending the colors and doing the stitchery on it. And when you have finished, the garment would be most colorful and could be really lovely. Using the same method, our grandmothers used silk patches to make slumber robes, pillow tops, etc. And just the other day, I saw the same crazy quilt idea used as a decorating theme for a child's room. A band of the colorful patches had been used on the bottom of plain drapes and repeated again in decorating the pillows and slumber robe for a day bed.

Silk stockings can be dyed lovely colors and used to make table

Puerto Rico's Good Food Adaptable in Modern Meals

"THE PUERTO RICAN COOK BOOK" is the latest publication of the Dietz Press, a Richmond, Va., firm which specializes in the issuing of interesting and unusual cook books.

It's by Elizabeth B. K. Dooley, who has lived in Puerto Rico for more than 40 years. Many of the recipes are of dishes and drinks prepared by "Isabel," her own cook, a native of St. Kitts, who always referred to herself proudly as "a British object." All the recipes were perfected through the years by the author from Isabel's explanation of a "pich of dis and a lump of dat."

Other recipes in the book are prized cookery secrets of the first families of Puerto Rico. Many of them were brought from Spain and have been handed down from mother to daughter for generations. Others are Puerto Rican dishes enriched by the blending of the knowledge of the Spanish senoras and the native cooks. Many are easily adapted to modern American kitchens.

The author, who is Mrs. Henry W. Dooley in private life, is a writer, musician, artist and social worker—and, of course, a collector and taster of recipes. Her attractive sketches of Puerto Rican scenes and characters illustrate the book.

Among the many delicious recipes is this one:

ARROZ CON POLLO
(Rice with chicken)
1 chicken
½ cup olive oil
Parsley
¾ pound rice
2 teaspoons salt
1-3 cup capers
½ cup olives
Spanish peppers
2 cloves garlic

Disjoint chicken and cut larger portions in fairly small pieces. Brown in half cup of olive oil and chopped parsley. Add raw rice and after it has taken on a golden color, add three cups of water and cook slowly, keeping covered to preserve the aroma. The rice should be cooked through but not broken open. Add salt, capers and olives cut up. Garnish with Spanish peppers and serve hot.

MODERN CORNER: This smart modern furniture will be used in the "Home of '48" to be decorated by the Peerless Furniture Company at 821 Crittenden St., ne. The unusual lamp, incidentally, is designed by Jascha Heifetz, the violinist, who is a West Coast furniture maker on the side. It stands on a corner table of blond oak, which matches the coffee table in the foreground. The coffee table top is of hand-tooled leather in deep red and the sectional sofa with biscuit-tufted backs are in the same color. You'll see them all in the "Homes of '48" exhibit, which will include 13 lovely model homes and open September 12. The Washington Post, 13 local builders, and 13 local furniture dealers are sponsoring the show.

Stuffed Vegetables Make Thrifty Main Dishes

When a pepper, a potato, a squash, an onion, or an eggplant is stuffed, it's not just a vegetable, it's a money-saving main dish! Try these vegetables stuffed for good eating, suggested by the Better Homes and Gardens Tasting-Test Kitchen.

Onions—Big, sweet precooked onions are stuffed with baked beans and crisp bacon. Bake and serve with hot brown bread.

Potatoes—Bake potatoes, then scoop out the centers, whip with hot milk and seasonings, as you would mashed potatoes. Fold in diced ham and grated cheese. Pile lightly into shells. Brown in hot oven.

Avocados—Peel avocados, cut in half lengthwise. Season with salt and lemon juice. Fill with flaked crab meat and drizzle with mayonnaise blended with chili sauce. Serve with crisp, salty crackers for appetizer or salad. Garnish with carrot curls.

Acorn squash—Cut squash crosswise and you'll get a pretty scalloped edging effect. Bake squash room stems and combine with cutside down in moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes. Brown sausage balls; turn squash and stuff. Bake another 30 or 40 minutes.

Mushrooms—Stuffed mushrooms are perfect plate mates for broiled lamb chops or steaks. Chop mushroom, bacon bits, soft bread crumbs, some chili sauce and lemon juice. Bake in cream.

Peppers—You can eat the "baking dish" because it's a green pepper filled and baked with well-seasoned ground beef, chopped tomato and fresh corn.

Tomatoes—A tomato, stuffed, becomes a main-dish salad. Cut each tomato in sections, not completely through, fill with tuna salad, and top with a pecan. Serve on leaf lettuce and garnish with deviled eggs.

Cabbage—Combine ground beef and port mixed with chili sauce, onion, rice, and seasonings. Spoon mixture onto large cooked cabbage leaves; roll and fasten with toothpick. Cook bundles in a Dutch oven.

Cool Drink

Here's a cool drink that is always welcome on hot afternoons.

MINT TINKLE
½ cup water
½ cup sugar
12 sprigs mint, chopped
½ cup fresh lime juice
1¼ cup grapefruit juice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 pint ginger ale

Combine water and sugar and simmer 8 minutes. Pour over chopped mint leaves and cool. Combine with fruit juices and salt. Pour over ice in four tall glasses and add ginger ale.

Cooking Lore

To make a delicious relish, chop some green peppers so that you have about a cup, add a cup of chopped sweet red peppers and a small onion that has been finely diced. Put a cup of vinegar in a saucepan and bring to the boiling point, add a quarter cup of sugar and a half teaspoon of salt, stir well, and pour over the vegetables. Let this relish stand for several hours before serving it. It may be kept in a refrigerator for several days longer.

To make horseradish sauce for cold boiled salmon, grate 3 or 4 tablespoons of horseradish; gradually add it to a half cup of thick cream that has been whipped with a half teaspoon of salt and a teaspoon of sugar.

Young snap beans are delicious when cooked in fat in a heavy large skillet. Use 2 tablespoons of drippings for 4 cups of cut snap beans, add a teaspoon of salt and cook covered, but stir the beans frequently, until they are tender. This will take from 20 to 25 minutes. Very young beans, fresh from the garden, are perfect for this method of cooking.

It is not necessary to flour a roast, but it may be rubbed with a cut clove of garlic or with a little dry mustard for good flavor.

In September Bridal Procession

Miss Murphy, Mr. Dugan Wed; Miss Griffin Bride of Mr. Ward

Miss Mary Margaret Murphy and Joseph Aloysius Dugan were married yesterday morning at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, the Rev. R. Paul Repetti officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Edmund A. Murphy of Washington and the late Mr. Murphy. Mr. Dugan is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah John Dugan, formerly of Washington.

William Francis O'Donnell gave the bride in marriage. Her gown was of ivory slipper satin with a lace border around the neckline, and a Chantilly lace bonnet held her full-length veil. She carried white orchids, lilies of the valley and stephanotis. Miss Jeanne Marie O'Donnell was maid of honor and Mrs. Francis Joseph Ferguson and Miss Helen Dunigan were bridesmaids. Miss Sallie Anne Curtin served as junior bridesmaid.

John Jeremiah Dugan was his brother's best man and the ushers were Dr. Robert L. Simpson, Dr. George J. Fleury, jr., Dr. John Francis Brennan, jr., Conrad Grant and Joseph B. Morris.

A reception followed in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. After their honeymoon in New England, the newlyweds will make their home in Washington. Mrs. Dugan, granddaughter of the late William Cannon, was graduated from the Convent of the Sacred Heart. Her husband was graduated from Catholic University and Georgetown University School of Medicine.

Arnest—Oatfield

Miss Susan Joy Oatfield, daughter of Mrs. John Oatfield of Washington, was married yesterday afternoon at Yeocomico Church in Westmoreland County, Va., to Richard Turberville Arnest, jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard T. Arnest of Oldhams, Va. The Rev. Clarence Buxton and the Rev. William B. Lee officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John Curno Oatfield. She wore a two-piece dress of pale blue-gray pebble crepe with a blue straw hat and matching accessories. She carried talisman roses. Miss Mary Jane Oatfield was maid of honor for her sister. Thomas Maund Arnest, 4th, was best man and the ushers were Dwight L. Isenhour, Edward G. Best, George Walker, jr., and Carter Arnest. A reception followed at Nomini Hall, home of the bridegroom's uncle, Thomas M. Arnest, jr.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will be at home in Richmond, Va. Mrs. Arnest will be graduated from Duke University. Her husband was graduated from Duke in June and he will enter the Medical College of Virginia this fall.

Miss Caudill To Be Married In October

The engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Sarah Jo Caudill, to Howard John Schellenberg, jr., has been announced by Mrs. Josephine Mathews Coudill of Pawhuska, Okla. Mr. Schellenberg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard John Schellenberg of Arlington, formerly of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The wedding will take place October 16 in the Immaculate Conception Church, Pawhuska, Okla.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Henry B. Caudill of Albuquerque, N. Mex., and the niece of Representative Michael A. Feighan of Washington and Cleveland, Ohio, and of John Joseph Mathews, noted author. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. William Shirley Mathews of Pawhuska.

Miss Caudill attended St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind., where she received her bachelor of arts degree in 1944.

Mr. Schellenberg received his B. S. degree from the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., in 1942 and was graduated from Georgetown Law School in June of this year. During the war he served as a captain with the Army in the India-Burma Theater.

The couple will reside in Virginia and Mr. Schellenberg will practice law in Washington.

marriage as John, in a different way. Whereas he is gnawed by dread of personal inadequacy and consequent rejection, you are the victim of romantic illusions about "love," and still hopeful of finding a mate who will be a happy blend of Romeo, Galahad and Santa Claus, which is to say that you are inordinately immature, on the score of social and emotional development.

For advice: Study Dr. Edmund Bergler's book, "Divorce Won't Help" (Harper & Brothers, publishers). In his repertory of neurotic characters, you will meet yourself and John, also your previously discarded partners, I daresay; and further, you will find that you are courting, in each other, the makings of a new mesalliance. To be forewarned is to be forearmed, hence the doctor's views may prevent that denouement.

For Your Holiday Picnic

recipe for enough to serve six persons follows:

SWEET-SOUR POTATO SALAD

8 potatoes
1 stalk celery, diced
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 onion, minced
1 tablespoon minced celery
3 sweet-sour pickles, diced
4 slices bacon, diced
2 eggs, well-beaten
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper.
½ cup vinegar, diluted with ½ cup cold water

Boil potatoes in jackets. When tender, peel and dice. Add celery, hard-cooked eggs, onion, pickle and parsley. Fry bacon until crisp and brown. Beat eggs, add sugar, spices and diluted vinegar. Mix well. Pour egg mixture into hot bacon fat and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened (about 10 minutes). Pour over potato mixture and mix lightly. This recipe serves six.

A LITTLE touch of sweetness is welcome at the end of any meal, including a picnic. One good way to provide it is with cup cakes. They're excellent travelers and easy to serve. Just wedge them firmly side by side in basket or box and cover with wax paper. If there's icing on top, be sure they're arranged so that this won't be disturbed.

PICNIC CUPCAKES

2½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 cup sugar
½ cup shortening
Milk (see below for amount)
3 egg yolks, unbeaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once. Measure into sifter with baking powder, salt, and sugar. Have shortening at room temperature. Mix or stir just to soften. Sift in dry ingredients. Add ½ cup milk, egg yolks, and vanilla, and mix until all flour is dampened. Then beat 2 minutes. Now add more milk—¼ cup more if butter, margarine, or lard was used for shortening; ⅜ cup if vegetable or other shortening was used.

Turn into greased pans, filling only half full. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) about 20 minutes or until done. This recipe makes 18 large or 36 small cupcakes.

These mix-easy cakes can be topped with an easy fluffy frosting, made as follows: Beat 1 egg white with dash of salt until stiff enough to hold up in peaks, but not too dry. Pour ½ cup corn sirup or honey in fine stream over egg white, beating constantly about 4 minutes or until frosting holds shape. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla, and spread frosting on cakes.

Picnic coffolate would be a good drink to have along with the cup cakes. It can be served hot or cold.

PICNIC COFFOLATE

1 cup strong coffee
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
3 tablespoons sugar
dash of salt
3 cups milk

Heat coffee in top of double boiler over low flame and melt chocolate in it, stirring constantly. Add sugar and salt and boil 4 minutes, stirring constantly. Place over boiling water. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly. Then heat. When hot, beat with rotary egg beater until frothy. Pour into thermos bottle for drinking hot later. Or chill before putting it in the model. This recipe serves four.

mats. These mats can be either crocheted as a rug is crocheted, or they can be hooked.

We should like to make use of our trunk as a play table for our little boy. It is made of vulcanized fibre with nail heads. Can you tell me what we can use to cover it? How can it be applied. S. T. H.

To cover it you could use plastic material which resembles leather, imitation leather, oil cloth or a plain colored canvas. These, with the possible exceptiton of the oil cloth, are available by the yard in the drapery departments of most department stores. To make it stay on, buy a piece the size of the top plus six additional inches on all sides for a hem. Now, sew a ½-inch hem around all four sides. Into this hem insert a ¼-inch band of elastic. Place the cover onto the trunk and pull the elastic so that it is tight enough to hold the cover snugly. Arranged in this way, the cover can be put on and taken off quickly. If you wish the cover to be more permanent, instead of using the elastic in the hem, attach ½-inch black elastic to each corner on each of the four sides. Have the elastic long enough to reach under the trunk and fasten to the corresponding piece from the opposite side. Putting this cover in place will necessitate some lifting of the trunk, but thus attached the cover will be very secure.

What will soften hardened shoe polish (brown or black)? We always have partly empty cans of this around the house. S. T. de S.

Drop a few drops of turpentine into the shoe polish can. Work it into the polish, put on the cover tightly and allow it to stand several hours before using.

What will soften dried-up indelible ink? S. S.

There seems to be nothing which can be added at home to dried ink to restore it.

Courses in 'Mother and Baby Care'

Registration is now open for two new Red Cross courses in "Mother and Baby Care," according to Mrs. Herbert S. Dudley, chairman of the District Red Cross Nursing Service. A class to be opened next week will meet September 8, 10 and 13. Another class will open on September 20 and 24.

The two courses are identical, each consisting of three days of class sessions conducted from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., with one hour off for lunch.

Red Cross "mother and baby care" classes include lessons in prenatal care, plans for delivery, postnatal care, the baby's first year, the child's health in relation to its environment, and protection of the family's health.

No Army-Navy Friction In Pacific's Skylanes; MATS One Happy Service

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HOLLYWOOD.

THOUGH Washington chit chats that Air Force and Navy squabble from top to lowest echelons, out in Hawaii this simply ain't so. Since June 1, Air Force and Navy planes, plus their respective flying personnel, have combined into the Military Air Transport Service to carry passengers, mail and important supplies. MATS is headed by Gen. Larry Kuder but the Pacific commander is Rear Admiral William G. Tomlinson, who lives in Georgetown when not on foreign service duty.

All in all, MATS flies some 65,000 route miles, has an air lift around 15 million ton miles per month, and as a global trunkline operator pays for itself by a transfer of funds from other Government departments—by flying mail from the State Department for instance. Besides the usual runs they do trick flights such as rushing vaccine to plague-stricken Cairo.

Out in the Pacific the setup is 20 per cent Navy and 78 per cent Air Force. They share physical facilities, combine in a single air terminal everywhere in the Pacific except at Guam, and in the Philippines where Air Force and Navy fields are too widely separated for practical single operation. Out in the Pacific MATS has three divisions, one going north to Alaska, a Western Division which fingers out from Guam and a third which reaches all the way from Fairfield Suisun Field in California through Hawaii, Johnston Island, Kwajalein, Guam, Manila, Bangkok, Calcutta, Karachi, Dharahram. Admiral Tomlinson, on a recent tour, worked all day aloft in his plane and had dinner on five successive nights in Guam, Hongkong, Bangkok, Shanghai and Tokyo.

Giant Transports

ALL IN ALL, MATS has some 115 planes and a personnel between 6000 and 7000, a decided contrast to the 20,000 planes the Army Transport Command operated during the war.

Their most exciting planes are the giant transports—the Navy flying boats of the Mars type and the Air Forces' C-97, a transport version of the Boeing stratocruiser B-29, made with a much deeper belly and capable of carrying 18,000 pounds of freight.

Though MATS is taking care of the main haul, the Marine Corps still has its own air component and handles amphibious operations while the Navy maintains a number of special air routes into our new trust areas and heads up all anti-submarine activities. Right now MATS is working on a new allocation system patterned after the Air Force and a system standardizing for importing and shipments of all kinds. In spite of many minor difficulties so far, Admiral Tomlinson assured "no fighting has broken out."

Pacific Islanders

MEANWHILE we have between 50,000 and 60,000 new charges protected by the American Flag. They're still unspoiled, unexploited natives on islands which we took over from Japan. The Navy has charge of this colorful new trust area and is setting the islanders on their feet physically and financially. A medical examination is planned for each and every islander and on the island of Tinian the Navy has established a colony for some 66 lepers which they have identified. The colony is to be in charge of Lieut. (j.g.) Dr. Jack Millar, who will live there with his wife. The Navy has taken over the Island Trading Co., which was formerly under Reconstruction Finance, and by encouraging handicapped and such has already turned a deficit into profit which is plowed back into the company. Since we've taken over, the island birthrate has begun to increase alarmingly. Admiral Dewitt C. Ramsay, Navy commander in chief in the Pacific, is planning new ways to plant breadfruit, to teach the natives how to fish more scientifically and a projected migration of some to the less populous islands of Truk and Ponape. Incidentally, these new charges of Uncle Sam habitually wear the scantiest trifle of palm leaves. On a recent tour an interpreter for a native chief asked Admiral Ramsay if the Navy was going to make them wear clothes. The admiral denied this move vehemently. Then the interpreter said slyly, "that's good because I didn't translate right for the chief. He really said he'd heard you were going to put clothes on him and he'd go to war rather than do it."

FOR those first cool days of autumn, your best wardrobe item is a classic wool dress. This one, designed by David Crystal, is of sheer wool and rayon plaid with black, brown or green background. Gold nob buttons fasten the shirt-collar and cuffs, and it is finished with a waist-fitting leather belt. Available in sizes from 10 to 18 at Raleigh Haberdasher

Miss Sweeney Becomes Bride

Miss Virginia Reid Sweeney, daughter of Mrs. John David Sweeney of Williamstown, W. Va., and the late Senator Sweeney, was married on August 21 to Bertrand Charles Thurston, son of Mrs. Thomas Garr Thurston of New York City and the late Colonel Thurston of Canterbury, England, and Cairo, Egypt. The Rev. Henry H. Clement performed the ceremony in the chapel of St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal Church.

The bride, gowned in blue trimmed with lace, was given in marriage by her brother, John Daniel Sweeney.

Mrs. Thurston was graduated from West Virginia University, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She took her graduate studies at George Washington University and is now a member of the faculty there. She was a lieutenant commander in the Waves during the war. Her husband is a graduate of the University of Paris, France, and the London School of Economics, England. During World War II, he served with the Army Air Forces in the Pacific and Mediterranean area. He is now with the New York State Department of Labor.

Women!

PROTEST THE TAX ON YOUR ATTRACTIVENESS!

It is time to call off the 20-per-cent tax on toiletries!

This man-made tax on feminine necessities is based on the idea that good grooming is a luxury. I don't think good grooming can be a luxury.

Shaving cream and razor blades for men are tax free, but you have to dip into your 20-per-cent-taxed handbag for an extra one-fifth (two cents on a ten-cent item; five cents on a twenty-five-cent item; twenty cents on a dollar item) for your cold cream and deodorant!

If the war emergency ever justified such discrimination against women, it doesn't any more.

If this tax is not repealed—and quickly—you will soon have to pay even higher prices for your powders, lipsticks, lotions, baby oils, baby powders, etc. Only quantity production held prices down.

When the toilet-goods industry was small, young, and high-priced, back in 1898 and again in 1917, we had a small war levy on cosmetics. But these taxes were promptly removed when the wars ended. Why not now?

This tax is yours. It was wished on you as a money-raising war measure. You have to pay it—nobody else. But you can stop it too. And I'm going to help you in every way I can.

This is election year. And you women have nearly two million more votes than we men have. Use them! Find out where your presidential candidate, your congressman and your senator stand on this issue that strikes at the pocketbooks of 45,000,000 women. And let them know where you stand.

If you or members of your family belong to a club, bring this issue up for discussion. I will supply you with a complete ready-to-present club program on "Should Feminine Attractiveness Be Taxed?"

Write to me. Tell me what you think. Let's stop this discriminatory, unfair raid on your pocketbook!

Lift Your Heads, Girls

The Taller They Are The Higher They Climb —In Hollywood

By Ida Jean Kain

TODAY'S column is for girls 5 feet 7 inches and up. Lift your chests, girls, the taller the girls come in Hollywood, the higher they climb. It looks as though tomorrow's actresses may be nigh onto 6 feet tall.

Ingrid Bergman, Hollywood's leading lady, is 5 feet 8½ inches without shoes. Jane Wyman, an Academy Award nominee, is 5 feet 8 inches. Alexis Smith, the screen siren, is the same height. The screen's beauties—Hedy Lamarr, Esther Williams, Marguerite Chapman, to name just a few—are all tall girls.

In fact, I can't think of a single short girl who is a comer in the movies. Of course, Shirley Temple, Betty Grable and Judy Garland have already made their place. But I have it on good authority that the studios are reluctant to take a chance on a newcomer 5 feet 2 inches. There probably will be no more big little stars like Janet Gaynor or Mary Pickford.

All of the models and movie stars I have talked with said to tell you that it is only during the early teens that you will feel self-conscious about your height. But they warn that taking a wrong slant on your height then may turn into a permanent handicap. So the first thing to do is to start thinking how nice it is to be tall . . . and live up to it. Never mind if the boys in your class are not quite so tall . . . they will shoot up and pass you in a year or two. Girls shoot up at an earlier age.

IN PICTURES, the tall girls never try to hide their height . . . that would be the first flaw noticed on the screen—and elsewhere. In fact, all successful career girls who have been tall since they were 12, learned early to make the most of their height. They pass on these pointers:

Stand as if being tall were the very nicest thing in the world . . . and lo, soon you begin to feel that it is. Learn what to do with your long legs. Never, never twine them, or try to hide them. In sitting on a divan, or a low chair, let your legs go to one side in a long, graceful line. Never sit with your feet on the floor, knees apart. In walking, move on long lines with steps in keeping with your height. Don't take mincing steps. Don't stride either. Walk with smooth, fluid grace.

Most tall girls have long necks. Think of your neck as a column and carry your head regally. Keep your chest up, back straight and shoulders relaxed, easy and graceful.

Marguerite Chapman has been tall since she was 12, and at that age practiced walking before a mirror to learn how to make the most of her height. This Columbia star and the other Hollywood tall girls are doing all right, too

And never forget that height is only a handicap to the girl who regards it as a handicap. It can lead to a glamorous career.

Questions Measure Student's Maturity For College Life

Are you preparing your son or daughter for life away from home? A college student must be able to regulate his life, assume full responsibility for his actions, and make his own decisions. Will your son or daughter be able to live as an independent individual in a competitive society? Whether your children are 7 or 17, here are five yardsticks from Better Homes and Gardens to help you decide.

1. A college student must know how to spend money. Wise budgeting, thoughtful spending and self-denial are signs of a mature and balanced personality, and of parents who succeed in a very difficult task.

2. A student must know how to care for his own health. Good health sense is a good reflection of his past home life and training.

3. A student needs social preparation for college. He must know how to get along with people. He will be judged not by wealth or position, but on how well he takes part in college activities, his sense of fairness and consideration for those with whom he lives and works.

4. A student must possess ideals. Youth is by nature idealistic, but it is a common mistake of parents to convince their sons and daughters that a list of taboos is equivalent to ideals. And, if a taboo is broken, the son or daughter is accused of losing his ideals.

5. A student needs academic and intellectual preparation. His attitude toward learning is your responsibility and it is more important than his store of information.

The choice of a college is important. For not only your child's career, but his character is influenced by his college. Yet, the preparation for college is more important than the choice of college. For preparation begins at birth and determines the quality of the raw material with which the college is to work.

Trial

Mrs. Robert Joseph Lessard, the former Helen Trezevant Caudle, will be at home in Fort Smith, Ark. She and Lieutenant Lessard of Princeton, Minn., were married recently in Fort Jackson, Columbia, S. C., and have been visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Alexander Caudle of Arlington, Va.

On the Town

BACK on August 13, Chesapeake Beach Park held the finals in a Miss Nation's Capital contest and Ruth Smallwood came up with a winning smile and a gold crown (simulated that is) on her pretty head. The next few days you saw a lot of pictures of her in all of the papers in this city and others, then poof, no more. Ever wonder what happens to one of these girls that wins a beauty contest?

Well, on the 10th of this month Ruth and her court will be going up to Atlantic City to be guests at the Miss America beauty contest. Quite a weekend has been planned for Ruth and her court (we're going along to see what it's all about in the capacity of court jester). She'll be the guest of Alan M. Graff, president of the Brighton Hotel, and Bernard Cooley, executive assistant. Ruth, Bobbie Jean Taylor (runner up) and the rest of the crowd should have a good time. They'll meet the mayor, lounge about in the best beauty queen fashion at the Cabana club of the Brighton, attend the eliminations at the contest, be dined in some of the clubs of the city and on Saturday night when the queen is crowned there'll be the ball in the Brighton for the contestants.

WE'LL label this one "Problems of an Agent," or "It Ain't All Hay and Honey." The other day we found ourselves in a conversation with a long established agent in town. Words finally wound around to the quality of acts that have been appearing in one of the spots the agent books for. It seems that when the agent books for this spot he has several partners to please. One likes this sort of act, the other is simply wild about that sort and it usually takes a lot of talking and thinking to get an act that will please all concerned.

This is all well and good, but when one of the bosses walks in and starts talking about an act that he happened to see in New York, friend agent knows he's stuck. With a resigned smile on his now pallid face, he asks if they want that act booked in. Natch! The happy act, which probably hasn't worked in weeks, makes with the John Henry on the contract and they're in, but the crowd isn't.

Two or three nights later when the spiders have completed their cobwebs on the cash register the unhappy owner asks the agent why the (that word) he ever booked such a bunch of beasts. Seeing a perfect out, our valiant agent reminds the owner whose choice the act was. It's hopeless though, and the owner asks why he ever let him mention such an act. Don't ever let it happen again, and so on into the night. Needless to say it happens again and the end of the story might well find our long-suffering agent sticking pins into effigies of both owners and acts as they cart him off to the looney bin and the land of never never. It all goes to show that when you'd rather use your hands on a steak instead of applauding it's not always the agent's fault. Our sympathy is more often than not with the poor 10 percenter.

Mayors Are Picked in Virginia; Hunter Gets Post at Roanoke

By The Associated Press

Many Virginia towns and cities yesterday had new mayors.

The naming of mayors took place Wednesday at organization meetings of city and town councils. Various municipal department heads also were appointed in some localities.

Norfolk's city council reelected Mayor Richard D. Cooke and named Councilman Pretlow Darden as vice mayor.

Roanoke's former city manager, W. P. Hunter, was elected president of the council—and as such, mayor—at an organization meeting of the council. He succeeded Richard T. Edwards, mayor for two years. The council in that city adopted an ordinance, offered by the mayor, to limit the terms of the presiding officer and vice mayor to one year.

Radford councilmen elected C. K. Howe, jr., mayor, and Asa W. Reese, publisher of the Radford News Journal, vice mayor. Howe succeeded Arthur M. Giesen.

Marvin G. Graham is the new Mayor at Pulaski, taking over from Allen T. Eskride. Pulaski councilmen named Tyler F. Wirt vice mayor.

City council at Hampton chose George C. Bentley mayor and W. W. Scott, jr., vice mayor, at its organization meeting.

Waynesboro's new city council elected F. R. Loth mayor, Harper A. Brower is vice mayor.

A dentist, Dr. James G. W. Gillespie, was elected Mayor of Bluefield, succeeding Reese C. Anderson.

Newport News councilmen reelected Dr. R. Cowles Taylor, a dentist, mayor and Councilman Harry Reyner vice mayor.

The Gallup Poll

Pennsylvania Veers Back to GOP Fold

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 2.—Pennsylvania, which went Democratic in the last three presidential elections, is today back in the Republican camp, judging by the findings of institute poll-takers throughout that State.

A cross-section of Pennsylvania voters was asked:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY, how would you vote—for Truman, for Dewey or for Wallace?"

The results follow, with the percentage of undecided voters included in the first column and excluded in the second:

Pennsylvania Voters
Dewey	53%	57%
Truman	37	40
Wallace	3	3
Undecided	7

Today's report on Pennsylvania follows a similar report last week on New York. These two represent the first of a series of reports which will cover political sentiment in each one of the 48 States.

Although New York is the home State of the Republican presidential candidate, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, actually runs better in Pennsylvania. The New York State political situation follows:

New York Voters
Dewey	42%	47%
Truman	32	37
Wallace	14	16
Undecided	12

One striking contrast between the two States is wide difference in the vote for Henry A. Wallace—16 per cent in New York and only 3 per cent in Pennsylvania. There is a heavy concentration of Wallace supporters in New York City, where the Institute estimates that he will receive one-third of all the votes that he will likely receive in the entire Nation in November.

The New York City political picture is unique, for other large cities do not show anywhere near the same vote for Mr. Wallace. In Philadelphia, for example, a poll by the Philadelphia Bulletin reported in early August showed Mr. Wallace with 6 per cent among voters expressing a choice, while Governor Dewey polled 52 per cent and President Truman 42 per cent.

This Wallace vote of 6 per cent in Philadelphia compares with 27 per cent in the Institute's mid-August poll of New York City.

* * * *

It was a Pennsylvanian, Senator Edward Martin, who put Governor Dewey's name in nomination at the Philadelphia convention. Another Pennsylvanian, Representative Hugh D. Scott, was appointed by Governor Dewey to be head of the Republican National Committee.

Throughout the State, the Dewey ticket this year has started off the campaign far ahead of 1944. In his race against President Roosevelt, Governor Dewey got 48.6 per cent of the major party vote, while Mr. Roosevelt carried the State with a vote of 51.4 per cent.

By tradition Pennsylvania is a Republican State. In the past 12 presidential elections it went Democratic only three times, and Republican eight times. In 1912 Pennsylvania ended up in the Progressive Party column when Theodore Roosevelt ran on the so-called Bull Moose ticket.

District Bible Society Secretary to Retire

The Rev. W. L. Darby will retire as executive secretary of the Washington City Bible Society October 1, it was announced yesterday.

Darby

Dr. Darby, who also is secretary of the National Capital District of the American Bible Society, came to Washington during World War I as an Army YMCA secretary. From 1922 until 1940 he was executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches. He has been with the local office of the American Bible Society for the last eight years.

Dr. Page M. Etchison, religious work director of the Washington YMCA for the last 33 years, will succeed him. He was co-founder with Dr. Homer J. Councilor of the Organized Bible Class Association and has been president of the organization since 1931. Dr. Etchison also served as vice president of the Washington Federation of Churches and the District of Columbia Sunday School Association.

Six Retired After Long U. S. Service

They are Leslie A. Nickerson, Claude R. Whitaker, Miss Winifred Payne, Miss Grace M. Mustard, Mrs. Edna A. Hennelly, and Lee M. Clarke.

Whitaker, a native of Maryland who lives at 3620 16th st. nw., entered Federal service in 1919 as a highway engineer. He has been with the Public Roads Administration since that time.

Nickerson, who was born in Salt Lake City, lives at 2408 N. Upton st., Arlington. He enlisted in the Signal Corps in 1917 and was commissioned in 1918. After the war, he became a draftsman at Camp Alfred Vail, N. J. (now Fort Monmouth), and in 1922 he transferred to the office of the chief signal officer in Washington.

Miss Payne, of 905 N. Frederick st., Arlington, entered Government service in 1918 as an employe of the Navy Department Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. She has been in the accounting group of the bureau as accountant and auditor for all of her 30-year tenure.

Miss Mustard of 1230 New Hampshire ave. was first employed as a clerk in the Office of the Chief of Staff in the War Department. She transferred to the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts in 1925, having served with the Interstate Commerce Commission and the compensation board of the Navy Department previously.

Mrs. Hennelly of 2025 I st. nw. began her career as a clerk in the Bureau of Markets, Department of Agriculture. She was a yeoman (second class) in the Naval Reserve in 1918, and continued in service of the Navy until her retirement yesterday.

Clarke has been employed by the Government for 36 years. The last 31 have been spent with the Food and Drug Administration, where he was executive officer. He lives at 2440 Monroe st. ne.

Police to Get More Space at Silver Spring

Renovation of the Silver Spring county building on Georgia ave. will begin next Tuesday, County Commissioner Oliver W. Youngblood said yesterday.

The improvements will include expansion of police headquarters and repainting of the building inside and out.

Main office of the police station will be moved to the deputy treasurer's office and the latter will be housed in the front part of the building. A wall between the side entrance and the deputy treasurer's office will be taken down. The original police office will be used as a squad room. In the rear of it will be a private office for the captain, lieutenant and sergeant, in addition to a new conference room for detectives.

Cost of the project has not been estimated, Youngblood said, because the work will be done by county employes assigned to labor, such as painters, carpenters, etc.

Montgomery Corn Crop Sets Record

Montgomery County farmers will harvest the largest corn crop in county history—an estimated 1,250,000 bushels—this month, O. W. Anderson, County agricultural agent, predicted yesterday.

The bumper crop, Anderson said, was brought to harvest through effective control of Japanese beetles. He estimated the crop at about 50 bushels an acre, and said there are 1250 corn growers in the county.

Total damage to crops, fruit and foliage by beetles this summer, according to Anderson, will be about $250,000—half the amount recorded for last summer.

Cooperation by the corn growers with various beetle control programs recommended by the Montgomery County farm bureaus was a major factor in saving the corn, Anderson said.

Farmers cooperated by planting soybean rings around their crops. These were saturated with a DDT solution. Other farmers sprayed or dusted both foliage and crop to ward off the beetles.

The public program sponsored by the county, sprayed 2800 miles of foliage along county roads and streets.

Beetle damage last summer to the corn crop alone amounted to $250,000. This year it will be $100,000 or less, Anderson said.

Good Bill for Youth

Having Trouble With Kids, Chase 'Em Over to the Met

By Orval Hopkins

"THE BLACK ARROW." Columbia release produced by Edward Grant. Whytock for Edward Small. Screen play by Richard Schayer, David P. Sheppard and Thomas Seller from the novel by Robert Louis Stevenson. Music by Paul Sawtell. Directed by Gordon Douglas. At the Metropolitan.

THE CAST

Richard Shelton ..... Louis Hayward
Joanna Sedley ..... Janet Blair

Sir Harry Shelton ..... Russell Hicks
Sir William Catesby ..... Leslie Denison
Dame Carter ..... Betty Fairfax
Jailer ..... William Bevan

THE bill at the Metropolitan is an ideal one for young people—folks, oh, 12 to 18, say. They set the young'ns up at the Met with a swashbuckle movie called "The Black Arrow" and then they slam 'em with a March of Time—type short about how and why the kids should be good.

I can't honestly recommend it to the creaky old parents—not even the short subject, which is a rehash of most of the stuff you've heard: Locking the boy up doesn't make him good, and the influence of home, school, church and community is needed to make him a good citizen.

It's all very true and a little trite. Besides, it was made for the State of New York and ends with the name of Thomas E. Dewey prominently displayed. I'm sure the Republican Party is responsible for the whole thing.

"The Black Arrow," from a novel by Robert Louis Stevenson, took me back, or almost back, to the carefree days when Douglas Fairbanks and his band of gentle cutthroats were roaming Sherwood Forest. There is rarely any need, even in the movies, to swerve from the text of a Stevenson novel, and I'm sure this picturization would have pleased RLS himself. At that, Columbia assigned three writers to fashion the story.

Louis Hayward Stars

Louis Hayward plays the dauntless hero of the film and there's no scrape he can't get into—or out of. I really never saw a man get into so many hopeless corners. Of course, it appears that in those days you could get away with murder, larceny and possibly arson if you could dig up an old cloak of the type worn by friars, and it is not once but several times that Hayward and his trusty henchman, Lawless, overplayed by Edgar Buchanan, extricate themselves from pretty touchy situations by masquerading as good men of the cloth. Halliwell Hobbes, speaking of men of the cloth, plays a bishop in this picture. He usually portrays the family butler and I never did get him really settled.

Anyway, Hayward comes home from some place to find his father slain, the murderer ostensibly executed and an evil uncle with his hooks on all the gold goblets.

Blame for the murder has been put on a Sir John Sedley, but Hayward, who is nobody's dullard, smells a mouse and sets about getting things right. In the doing he wins fair lady, the daughter of Sir John, has fights with sword, mace, lance, war hatchet and dirk and meets the Duke of Gloucester.

Incidenfally, the duke, probably one of history's towering villains, is portrayed as a wise and witty noble, a man of justice and sensibility, until somebody—probably a guilt-stricken writer—has the duke ask a young maid to leave off complimenting him. "You'll spoil my reputation," he says. Lowell Gilmore plays the Duke of Gloucester. Janet Blair is the lady of the piece and she excited Hayward more than she did me, a non sequitur if I ever saw one.

Good fare, as I say, for the young folks.

Another short at the Met is called "Unusual Occupations." It deals with occupations which, like the dog walking on its hind legs, are unusual but not very interesting.

One on the Aisle—

Top Comedy Set In Berlin Ruins

By Richard L. Coe

"A FOREIGN AFFAIR," at the Palace, is a wry, lively comedy that will keep you chuckling from takeoff to its final destination.

Marlene Dietrich, Jean Arthur and John Lund are the pivotal folk in this one. The story concerns Yanks in the less embroiled Berlin of a year ago. The humor is racy and pointed. Whether the year will bring a sharper comedy from Hollywood remains to be seen.

Much of the slick tone of "A Foreign Affair" must come from the Charles Brackett-Billy Wilder producer-director-writer team. Those are the boys who gave the screen "The Lost Weekend" and most recently came up with the tongue-in-cheek "Emperor Waltz." The knowing lads have done it again.

For "A Foreign Affair" is almost cynically tongue-in-cheek." It tells of an investigating Congresswoman who goes to Berlin to see how the occupation troops' morals are coming along. She takes a cake for a good-looking captain from the daughter of one of her constituents. Before she's been in the rubble long, she learns that devastation can have its effect on people.

Th captain, as that precise Army slang puts it, has been shacking up with a night club babe of present glamor and Nazi past. The Congresswoman is convinced that someone is shielding the wench, and prevails upon her fellow Iowan to ferret out—himself. In an effort to protect his fraulein and himself, the captain plays at l'amour with the prissy lady from Iowa. With understandable zest, that lady gives herself up to her first romance in a long while.

"A FOREIGN AFFAIR." Paramount release produced by Charles Brackett. Screen play by Billy Wilder, Charles Brackett and Richard L. Breen from an adaptation by Robert Harari of an original story by David Shaw. Directed by Wilder. Music by Frederick Hollander. Photographed by Farciot Edouart, Dewey Wrigley and Gordon Jennings. At the Palace.

THE CAST

Phoebe Frost ..... Jean Arthur
Erika Von Schluetow .. Marlene Dietrich
Captain John Pringle .. John Lund
Col. Rufus J. Plummer .. Millard Mitchell
Hans Otto Birgel ..... Peter Von Zerneck
Mike ..... Stanley Prager
Joe ..... Bill Murphy
Military Police ..... Gordon Jones
Military Police ..... Freddie Steele
Penacoott ..... Raymond Bond
Griffin ..... Boyd Davis
Kraus ..... Robert Malcolm
Yandell ..... Charles Meredith
Salvatore ..... Michael Rafeto
Lieutenant Hornby .... James Larmore
Lieutenant Colonel .... Damian O'Flynn
Major ..... Frank Fenton
General McAndrew .... Harold Tucker
Lieut. Lee Thompson .... William Neff
General Finney ..... George Carleton

He Has a Reason

All this is more moral than you might think. The captain, it is made reasonably clear, is merely toying with the Lorelei's singer to lure her former Nazi lover out of hiding. This adventurous task accomplished, he's able to clear up the Congresswoman's unhappy realization that she's been a mooning school girl.

Such a plot as this—a thick coating of cynical humor over a sentimental, romantic core—is meat to all concefned. The writers have kept a running parade of wisecracks throughout their story and you certainly couldn't ask for a more assured trio to play the leads.

Marlene the Great, for instance, is more fascinating than she's been since she asked what the boys in the back room would have in "Destry Rides Again." The role fits her like those gowns she flaunts in her nitery scenes, and Frederick Hollander has written her a trio of perfect Dietrich songs. Her curious sing-song moan rumbles through "The Ruins of Berlin" in four languages and she sums up the despair of bitterness in "Black Market." "Illusions" is her third number.

Jean Arthur, back on the screen after a four-year absence, may make the Congresswoman too foolish for your ideals (I hate to write "Congresswoman," for my favorite Capitol Hill lady always prefers to be called a "Congressman.") But Jean is mighty skilled at this sort of thing and one always must remember that, "A Foreign Affair" is primarily a comedy.

A MEMORABLE SCENE

Which sometimes may be hard. After such films as "The Search" and "Berlin Express," it is macabre to find humor in one of the massive upheavals of our time; the ruins of Berlin, the bitter, unrelenting hardness of the people of which Mr. Kuhn has lately written so effectively. Still, there is a bitter humor in all this and the writers have reflected it brilliantly. Jack Benny tried much the same thing some years ago in the ruins of Warsaw for "To Be or Not to Be," and the effect is comparable.

John Lund is expert as the captain and you'll long remember his scene with Miss Arthus in which she drifts from screaming "Listen" into reciting Longfellow's saga of Paul Revere. It's an immensely clever scene and likely to become a movi classic. Miliard Mitchell, that admirable stage player, is fine as Lund's astute colonel, and the cast is uniformly swell.

Yes, "A Foreign Affair" is one of the comedies of the year and you'll want to see it.

Probers Seek Answer to Jackpot Question

A congressional committee and the FCC are currently pondering the question: "Does the law require that atheists be given a chance to answer religious broadcasts?"

So far, the consensus seems to be "God only knows."

HEIR-MINDED

Betty Koontz of 517 Four Mile rd., Alexandria, Va., is a hostess on Capital Airlines. But she has the curiosity of a born reporter, and the other day her snub nose for news turned up a good story.

BETTY

Betty was working a flight from Norfolk to Washington, and noticed that her passengers included a spry young couple carrying a very small baby.

"What a lovely baby," exclaimed Betty. "How old is he?"

"Just five days old," beamed the couple in unison. "Isn't he adorable?"

"Yes, but . . . if he's just five days old . . . I mean, didn't you leave the hospital rather quickly?"

"Oh, no," laughed the lady. "I'm not superwoman. We've just adopted him and we're taking him home."

Capital Airlines officials are still checking, but they're pretty sure that Betty's discovery is the youngest customer the line has ever hauled.

PERSONAL NOTES

Burt and Don Engel, 126 Webster st. nw.: I've got a better idea. Instead of having me judge your mustaches, send me your pictures and let the readers choose the better man.

Helen S. Eberhart, 514 19th st. nw.: Thanks; will do.

Mrs. Anita Buchanan Speer, Berkeley Springs, W. Va., and Darline R. Volk, 4410 14th st. nw.: Thanks a lot for the November and December clippings, which complete my files.

JUST WHAT WE NEEDED

Chemists have developed a combination of cloth and plastic which is said to be as strong as armor plate.

Just the thing for office workers who wear out both pairs of pants while the coats and vests of their suits remain as good as new.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Overheard: "Oh, well—we're only human once."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Why does the need for lawn-mowing always become clear to the missus when the mercury stands at its highest?

Since many of your readers are women, let's see if they can offer an explanation.

According to your rules, I sign my name; but I trust that you will use only my initials. In that way, the evidence against me will be circumstantial, but not fully conclusive. E. H. B.

Dear E. H. B.:

Inasmuch as I am a cliff-dweller, I have no lawns to mow, and can offer no comment. We'll leave it to the ladies.

While they're answering, perhaps they can explain another point, along similar lines.

Why is it that the minute a man settles himself in his favorite chair, a honeyed voice from the next room will ask him to close the windows, open the windows, answer the phone, or bring her a book or a drink?

One night, after this had happened once too often, I grabbed up the cushion of the chair, certain that I'd find an electric buzzer system under it.

But I found nothing except two hairpins and 7 cents in change—and I still can't understand how she knows exactly when I'm sitting down. Bill.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Mother cat and three adorable kittens with sweet but lively dispositions." (Overlook 0806).

"Friendly, 4-month-old male fox terrier." (Randolph 6527).

"Please find a home for Ingrid Q., who is a real gone kitten." (Woodley 6380).

"Year-old gray tiger cat, female." (Columbia 0437 after 7 p. m.).

"Two of the worst kittens in captivity; about 6 weeks old; they eat anything—including curtains—but are a source of never-ending amusement." (Overlook 6797).

CLEW

E. W. of Chicago, Ill., helps to explain why the telephone companies prefer to add a digit to our phone numbers (rather than let us dial a third letter in the name of the exchange).

They're saving that third letter against the day we'll be dialing some of our long-distance numbers.

ADD SIMILES

As short as "200 yards" on a golf driving range

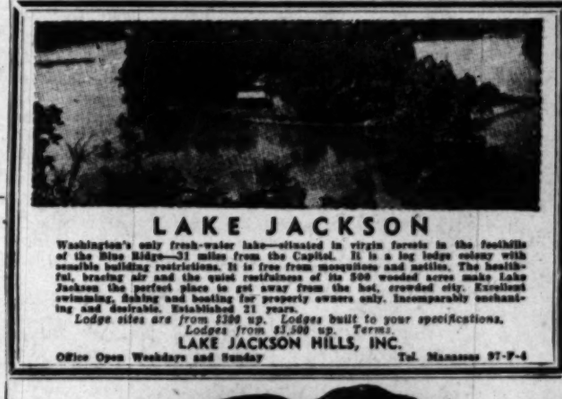
NEW YORK.—Field Marshal Von Rundstedt, one of the most brilliant of Germany's military men, is about to go on trial in Nuernburg. His pre-trial interrogation was conducted by Capt. Harry Sperber, the former sports columnist for German-language newspapers in New York . . . When the interrogation ended, the arrogant Von Rundstedt stooped and picked up a cigarette butt which Sperber had dropped. He pocketed it, and said: "See, captain? The history of this war is being epitomized: A field marshal of Germany has to stoop, and when he does it's to pick up and save the stub of a used cigarette."

George Olson, the bandleader, was reminiscing of his Saratoga days, when there were many gambling casinos which paid high fees for entertainers whose presence could lure the customers inside. One such place offered Olson $5000 a week, but the bandleader refused the job because the management refused to pay the transportation costs, which amounted to $100 . . . Another orchestra was hired. Olson, who was in Saratoga that night, attended the opening as a guest, visited the gambling-room annex, and lost $6000.

Gertrude Lawrence will be starred in Daphne DuMaurier's play, opening in England in October . . . The WNBT telecast of the Navy show from the Leyte, one of the major beats in the history of television, was arranged by John Royal more than a year ago. Royal nursed the project until the final moment, and three minutes before the telecast they still weren't sure it could be done . . . When Herman Levin, the lawyer-producer, was separated from his wife, he inserted a clause in their separation agreement that if the temperature should rise above 90 he'd be permitted to use the room where he had installed an air-cooling system. All last week Levin exercised this clause.

William Saroyan has settled in a New York apartment with his wife and children and the new drama season will be brightened by his return to the Broadway stage. The gifted writer does his work in all sorts of places—from a field in Fresno, Calif., to a large suite in the most expensive New York hotels . . . Once, while he was dining at George Mardikian's in San Francisco, he was asked by the proprietor to write an introduction to a cook book. "Sure," said Saroyan . . . "When?" asked Mardikian . . . "Here and now," said Saroyan, stirring his coffee. "Just bring me some paper. The mood and the setting are right for it."

One of Joe Louis' friends was asked if the retired champ would fight again. He said that frankly he didn't know—but cited the story of Jackie Kid Berg, who anounced: "I've had enough of fighting. I'm hanging up my gloves for good. I'm going to conserve whatever youth is left to me. I'm finished with all prize fighting—unless, of course, someone should come along and offer me $1000 for a fight" . . . A Broadway cafe owner complaining of poor business, said: "It's so bad that I keep my clothes in my desk and the bills in the closet" . . . Joe DiMaggio is planning a European tour after the season ends.



LAKE JACKSON

Washington's only fresh-water lake—situated in virgin forests in the foothills of the Blue Ridge—31 miles from the Capitol. It is a log lodge colony with sensible building restrictions. It is free from mosquitoes and nettles. The healthful, bracing air and the quiet restfulness of its 500 wooded acres make Lake Jackson the perfect place to get away from the hot, crowded city. Excellent swimming, fishing and boating for property owners only. Incomparably enchanting and desirable. Established 21 years.

Lodge sites are from $300 up. Lodges built to your specifications. Lodges from $3,500 up. Terms.

BALDNESS

WHEN your hair begins to thin at the (1) temples, (2) crown, or (3) frontal point, you are being warned that baldness may be approaching. Various authorities feel that proper hygienic treatment, such as afforded by Thomas treatment, may be helpful in retarding baldness. Thomas treatment effectively removes itchy dandruff scales from your scalp and leaves it tingling with a fresh, clean healthy feeling. The itch which exuviae or dandruff may cause is soothed. During the past 25 years more than a quarter-million persons have received the pleasant benefits of Thomas treatment. Such popularity is deserved.

You, too, may find relief from your hair problem by consulting a Thomas expert. Consultation and advice is gladly given without charge or obligation—always in private. Come in today—see for yourself how Thomas treatment works.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Root Cause of Feud Unsettled

(While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

It now develops there was a hefty jigger of wishful thinking in that we're-all-pals statement issued after the hush-hush pow'wow of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Forrestal

The accord was largely superficial. The root cause of the long-standing Navy-Air Force feuding was settled only on the surface. The basic issue between them, control of strategic bombing, is still as unresolved as before.

What actually happened was this:

Defense Secretary Forrestal cracked the whip on the military chiefs. In effect, he ordered them to stop interservice rowing. As officers, they bowed to this command. They promised to clamp down on further bickering. But on the bitter cause of this vendetting, Forrestal got little more than a patch-quilt truce.

The Navy still retains a big oar in strategic bombing—a fact of which the Air Force is acutely aware and resents as hotly as before the imposed harmony.

It can be safely predicted that the Air Force will never relinquish its claims to supremacy in this field. The A. F. feels that Forrestal, a former Secretary of the Navy, is partisan toward that service and has repeatedly favored it against the A. F. As evidence of this, the fact is cited that Forrestal is allowing the Navy to put into operation the program propounded by Rear Admiral Dan Gallery to make the Navy the dominant strategic bombing branch.

When Gallery's scheme got into the public prints, the Navy officially repudiated it and announced that he had been formally reprimanded by the Secretary of the Navy. But at this very moment, it's a fact that Gallery's plan is being quietly put into effect.

The next time there is a decisive showdown between the two services, Forestal's widely publicized "peace" will vanish in thin air.

Job Hunting

Forrestal had another meeting during his stay on Long Island. This one also was secret, but there was no statement about it afterward, as on the Chiefs-of-Staff session.

The Democratic Secretary of Defense talked to the Republican candidate for President about the desirability of maintaining "continuity of policy" in running the Defense Department.

It's an open secret that Forrestal would like to hold on to his job regardless of the outcome of the November election. Governor Dewey did not commit himself.

President Truman is having his portrait painted. It's being done by Tade Styka, Polish artist, who has painted a long list of notables. The President poses in his upstairs White House study for an hour every morning before going to his office.

New Clash With Clay

The striped-pants boys of the State Department have crossed swords again with Gen. Lucius Clay, this time over the tragic DP problem.

In an effort to get the thousands of Jewish DP's out of their squalid camps, the United States occupation commander authorized transportation to the German border for all desiring to migrate to Palestine. He took this stand on the ground it was humane and also would help reduce occupation costs.

But the State Department is now demanding that Clay lock the DP's in their camps; that is, to make these camps, in effect, concentration camps.

At the bottom of this move is the British Foreign Office. The British are refusing to allow any Jewish DP's under their control to go to Palestine. More than 12,000 are being held behind barbed-wire stockades in Cyprus, admittedly without legal authority, and many more thousands have been locked up in British camps in Germany.

The British are pursuing this policy as part of their pro-Arab tactics. And the State Department, over Clay's vehement protests, appears to be playing the British game.

The Palestine truce does not bar Jewish immigration. Only men under arms or undergoing military training are prohibited from entrance.

Note—General Clay has warned Washington a ban on immigration may lead to serious disturbances in the DP camps due to the break-up of many families. Parts of families have alreday reached Palestine, while other members are still in the German camps.

Always With You

Some night when we are all alone . . . And stars are in the sky . . . I want to say I love you, dear . . . And try to tell you why . . . I want to whisper in your ear . . . The words that you inspire . . . And let you know that you are all . . . I ever could desire . . . That you encourage me each day . . . With sympathy and pride . . . And just because I know that you . . . Are always at my side . . . I do not mind the rain or snow . . . Or any kind of weather . . . As long as we divide the dreams . . . That keep our hearts together . . . As long as I may walk with you . . . Wherever you may be . . . And just as long as I am sure . . . That you belong to me.
